Britain to Ask Apology, London Asserts

Coast Jaunt By Roosevelt In New Court Fight Hinted

Visit to Daughter in Seattle Could Be Used for Talks.

President Roosevelt last night apparently had decided to visit the Pacific Northwest on a trip late in September which will carry the Supreme Court fight into the home States of five anticourt bill Democratic Senators.

At the summer White House at Hyde Park, an aide to the President said such a trip is "under consideration." The Associated Press dispatch which reported this added there are increasing indications the President has decided to make such a trip.

This belief was further strengthened by publication of a story in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, of which Mr. Roosevelt's son-in-law, John Boettiger, is publisher, which stated that the President will make the trip "to secure first-hand information on the accomplishments in this area under his Administration."

Family to Visit.

The newspaper added further that Mrs. Roosevelt will accompany the President and will visit Mrs. Boettiger. The accomplishments in which the President is interested were said to be, especially, the Bonneville and Grand Coulee Dams. Direction of future power policy, both as to operation and rates, might be influenced by such a visit.

The power with which Mr. Roosevelt would be most concerned on such a trip, however, might well be political instead of electrical. It would be feasible and, perhaps, logical, for his train to halt in Missouri, Nevada, Nebraska, Wyoming, and Montana, wherein these Senators may respectively be fighting for their political lives next year: Bennett Champ Clark, Patrick McCarran, Edward R. Burke, Joseph C. O'Mahoney, and Burton K. Wheeler.

It would be equally feasible and logical for the President to show his displeasure with opponents of his court bill, yet never to abandon the dignity of the Presidential office by mentioning names.

Could Show Favor.

In Montana, for instance, where Representative Jerry O'Connell is expected to fight Senator Wheeler in the Democratic primary, it would be a simple matter for the President to invite O'Connell to sit with him on a platform, ride with him on the train or otherwise exhibit preference.

The President, in fact, already has demonstrated to one of the very Senators whose territory he now appears ready to invade, how such power can be wielded effectively.

When Senator Burke, in 1932, was fighting grimly for the seat he now holds, the President was asked by then National Committeeman Arthur Mullen to do something to advance Burke's cause in the primary.

This Mr. Roosevelt did by singling out a quotation from a speech by Burke, incorporating it in his ad-

John Russell Pope, Designer Of Mellon Art Gallery, Dies

Dean of Architects Also Planned Jefferson Memorial.

By Edward T. Folliard

John Russell Pope, often called the dean of American architects, died in New York last night after an operation. He was 63.

His death followed by 24 hours that of Andrew Mellon, who had commissioned him to design the National Gallery of Art here, a $10,000,000 structure that is to house Mellon's great art collection.

Pope became ill early this month at his summer home in Newport, R. I., and was taken to the Harkness Pavilion Medical Center in New York. He underwent an operation on August 9 from which he failed to rally.

He is survived by his wife, the former Sadie Jones, of Wilmington, N. C.; a daughter, Jane, and a sister, Mrs. Robert H. Patchin, of New York. Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

Buildings and memorials designed by Pope are numerous in Washington. The site of the National Gallery of Art is just southeast of one of his structures, the Archives Building. He also was architect for the Scottish Rite Temple on Sixteenth street, the white marble headquarters of the Pharmaceutical Institute on Constitution avenue, Constitution Hall and the National Christian Church.

He also was retained to design the proposed Jefferson Memorial here. His plan precipitated a hurricane of protest, which has not altogether abated.

The memorial, a big Graeco-Roman temple, would have been located in the Tidal Basin, which is encircled with the world-famous Japanese cherry trees. When the plan was made public civic leaders, businessmen and art lovers piled protests on the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, headed by Representative John J. Boylan (Democrat), of New York.

The House Library Committee, which had indorsed Pope's plan, voted to reconsider and to postpone indefinitely a start on the memorial. In the closing days of the last session, an item of $500,000 for preliminary costs of the memorial was knocked out of a deficiency appropriation bill. However, provision was made for the continuance of the Jefferson Memorial Commission.

U.A.W. Votes $400,000 for Drive on Ford

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Aug. 27.—The United Automobile Workers voted a one-dollar-a-member special assessment today to create a $400,000 war chest for its campaign to organize 125,000 employes of the Ford Motor Co.

The action was taken shortly after John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, told the U. A. W. convention "we are going to organize Ford workers."

The convention adopted a resolution, offered by William E. Dowell, of Kansas City, organization committee chairman, with a howling, standing vote.

The resolution provided for setting up Ford department and building organization committees, house to house canvasses, radio broadcasts, advertising, and "all moral and financial support of the international union."

Rallies Delegates.

Coming to the U. A. W.'s embattled national convention in the role of peacemaker, Lewis rallied bickering delegates by challenging Henry Ford, declaring for labor's greater participation in national politics, and by calling William Green a "traitor."

Lewis was cheered loud and long when he declared:

"Henry Ford may believe his will is superior to the will of his employes; he may believe he is bigger than the United Automobile Workers, bigger than Congress in refusing to abide by the Wagner act, but if he continues to believe these things he will become a very tired old man.

"Some of these days he will get very, very tired, and stop flying in the face of the inevitable and accord the right to organize to his employes."

Amid applause he added:

"The C. I. O. has organized the mass production industries and is destined to carry on enrollment of millions more of American workmen who shall use their political strength to make this a better country."

No Labor Party Aim.

In an interview later, Lewis said this reference should not be interpreted as indicating an intention to organize a national labor political party.

"Like the American Revolution patriots had their Benedict Arnold, labor in this country today, the A. F. L. and the United Mine Workers, have their own contemptible traitor—Bill Green," Lewis thundered.

"But a traitor can't stop the onward movement of the C. I. O."

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 27 (AP). William Green reported to the American Federation of Labor executive council today that hundreds of textile workers had joined A. F. of L. unions recently despite an aggressive C. I. O. organization campaign.

U. S. Price Peg Fixed at 9 Cts. For Cotton Crop

Commodity Credit Corporation Agrees on Rate Under Roosevelt Deal.

The Commodity Credit Corporation last night was virtually agreed on a price-pegging loan of 9 cents a pound to cotton farmers.

Terms of the loan were not disclosed. Details were expected to be announced today or Monday by the corporation, in conjunction with the Agriculture Department.

The announcement will carry out the President's "gentleman's agreement" to approve crop loans, if Congress would give crop-control legislation first consideration at the next session. Congress did this by resolution.

South Wants 10 Cents.

A 9-cent loan would follow recommendations of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who recently "questioned the desirability of making loans above the market" and said he "didn't want the whole loan program discredited by losses."

Senators from the cotton States have recommended a 10-cent loan to bolster cotton prices. Cotton prices have wavered between 9 and 10 cents a pound.

Regardless of the loan, cotton farmers are assured of 12 cents for their cotton, under subsidy features of the "gentleman's agreement." Congress wrote the 12-cent subsidy into the third deficiency bill just before adjournment.

The subsidy also tied into the Administration's crop control plans for 1938 by limiting the relief to cotton farmers who promised to co-operate in the not-yet-enacted crop adjustment program.

'Hidden Deals' Charge Denied By Comptroller

By Sidney Olson.

Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor last night gave The Washington Post a complete denial of a long list of charges against the integrity of his office, contained in a wave of "letters to the editor" published in Washington and Atlantic City newspapers.

O'Connor will decide today whether to ask investigation by Tresaury agents of the source of the letters, many of which have been directly addressed to the Treasury here.

Deputy Comptroller Gibbs Lyons said that in his opinion the letters stemmed from a single source, and constituted "a one-man wave of malicious propaganda against this office."

Charges Varied.

The charges range from the assertion that the Comptroller's agents sold $175,000 worth of hotel equipment for $10,000 in Atlantic City, by private sales, to the declaration that bank buildings in the resort city were sold for prices materially below assessed values to individuals close to Democratic politicians.

A favorite charge in the letters is that Atlantic City bank depositors received 5 per cent of their

Refusal by Tokyo Expected; Thousands Die at Shanghai

Invaders Push Chinese Toward Trap; New Areas Bombed.

Slain Strew Fields To North of City

U. S. Mission Wrecked; 300,000 Dig in to Defend Nanking.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Aug. 28.—Japanese and Chinese armies were pitted today on a devastated, wavering battlefront that cut a wedge from the south bank of the Yangtze River toward Shanghai.

The tip of the wedge, which a concentrated Japanese army was pushing against the almost suicidal resistance of China's defenders, was at Lotien, 12 miles northwest of the city.

Waves of Japanese infantrymen charged with drawn bayonets there through sheets of Chinese machine-gun fire, leaving the town a smoking bed of ashes littered with the dead of both sides. Thousands were killed and wounded.

The base of the wedge followed the shore of the Yangtze from Liuho, northwest of Lotien, to Paoshan, on the northeast.

Foreign military observers predicted Japan, continually landing new reinforcements, soon will have massed an army of 100,000 in the Shanghai area.

Victory Essential for Japan.

They said this force is being rushed from Japan to the Asiatic mainland because Tokyo recognizes the battle of Shanghai is a crucial test for her war machine. With the future of China and perhaps of Japan itself in the balance, Japan cannot afford a defeat here.

The Japanese apparently are employing the same tactics as in the 1932 Shanghai hostilities. Their strategy seems to be to maneuver the Chinese into a pocket in the heart of the Liuho-Woosung district to cut off retreat.

Meanwhile the United States embassy at Nanking was informed the American Methodist Ladies' Missions Home at Nanchang had been destroyed by Japanese aerial bombs the night of August 25 during an air raid on a Chinese concentration in the town.

Foreign Ships Exempted.

Simultaneously the U. S. consulate general filed three protests with the Japanese consulate general against the bombing and machine-gunning of American property at the Southern Baptist School at Soochow August 16, the United Christian Society's Nantungchow hospital August 17, and the Poplar Grove Dairy August 25.

Further reinforcements for the Marines guarding United States nationals in the International Settlement were ordered to Shanghai. The transport Chaumont was to sail from San Diego, Calif., Sunday, with 1,200 Marines. The cruiser Marblehead, acting as convoy, will carry 108 Marines.

[Japan, in her blockade against Chinese ships, does not intend to interfere with legitimate shipping of the United States or other foreign powers, even if their ships are carrying munitions of war, Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Kawagoe and Fleet Commander Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa informed the United Press.—Editor's note.]

With the undeclared war centered in that area, well outside the in-

U. S. Warns Japan and China Of Responsibility for War Toll

Hull Reveals Formal Notice Sent to 2 Powers; Holds Both Accountable for Any Losses Suffered by Americans.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Through its diplomatic representatives at Tokyo and Nanking, the United States Government yesterday served notice on both Japan and China that it reserves on behalf of itself and its nationals all their rights in China and proposes to hold those governments strictly responsible for any damage or injury to American life or property.

This was revealed yesterday by Secretary of State Hull at his regular press conference. Hull said instructions had been forwarded to the American embassies in Tokyo and Nanking to make formal representations.

This was not the first time that American authorities have warned th Japanese and Chinese that they will be held responsible for any American losses as a result of the current conflict. American representatives at Shanghai informally have made such representations several times in the last month.

But it was the first time since the present outbreak of hostilities

England Also Insists on Indemnity; Nippon Fears 'Losing Face.'

Defiant Answer May Cause Break

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Aug. 27.—Great Britain tonight dispatched to Japan her demands for "full satisfaction" for the machine-gunning of Ambassador Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen.

The empire's action, in the form of instructions to the British Ambassador in Tokyo, Sir Robert Clive, was understood reliably to give the Japanese the choice of "losing face" in the Orient or inviting the open wrath of his majesty's government.

Britain insists upon indemnity and a formal apology for the attack upon her ambassador, reliable sources said.

Japan Would "Lose Face."

If Japan submits to the note and apologizes, her prestige will receive a humiliating blow at a crucial time.

Should she reject the demand, as it was generally believed she would, it would be—technically—a personal affront to King George VI calling for grave consequences, for the Ambassador is the monarch's personal envoy to the Chinese government.

"Regrets" Extended.

Yoshida went voluntarily to the foreign office and extended his government's "regrets." He was unable to swerve Eden from a course of stern action.

Yoshida told Eden an intensive investigation of the attack would be made "immediately and that the Japanese government held sincere wishes for the Ambassador's speedy recovery."

King George, facing the first major crisis of his three-month reign, was kept constantly informed of developments at Balmoral Castle in Scotland.

"Outrage," Says the Times.

Observers considered the attitude of the press significant.

It was understood by the Daily Express that if the Japanese government does not give satisfaction for the incident within a reasonable length of time, diplomatic relations may be suspended at least temporarily to emphasize the protest.

The conservative Times, closely reflecting the government's viewpoint, said bluntly "this is an outrage for which there is no parallel."

"Apologies alone will not be sufficient reparations for an 'accident' of this kind. The status of an ambassador is sacrosanct. Nothing excuses its violation. This outrage serves to underline implications of an intolerable situation. The British government doubtless will know how to obtain satisfaction and it may be assured of the strongest public support for any 'appropriate action' it may decide to take."

Chamberlain, King Confer.

German Liner, Crew Ill, Lands 1,000 at N. Y. After Skipping Quarantine; Typhoid Feared

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 27.—A German liner discharged nearly 1,000 passengers here today, city health authorities said, before disclosing that 16 of her seamen were ill with a fever, tentatively diagnosed as typhoid or paratyphoid.

Tonight, as the list of sick seamen rose to 21, the medical resources of the city and Port of New York, of the United States Public Health Service and of the health services of the home States of passengers, were put to the task of protecting the public from possible infection.

The ship, the Hamburg-American liner Hansa, cleared without examination at Quarantine, said Dr. William H. Best, assistant to the health commissioner of New York, by applying for and receiving a "radio pratique"—a system under which a stop at Quarantine is waved if a vessel's surgeon radioes belief there is no quarantinable disease aboard.

Health Commissioner John L. Rice said it appeared [illegible] had been "a definite violation" of the radio pratique agreement "on the part of the steamship company."

Dr. Charles V. Akin, in charge of the quarantine station, announced the Hansa's surgeon, Dr. H. Grieshaber, would be "relieved of eligibility" to obtain radio pratiques.

Dr. Grieshaber said the seamen's sickness possibly was due to the effects of a fumigant used in the ship at Hamburg. Dr. Rice said none of the crew would be permitted to leave the ship.

"We suspect the cases to be typhoid or paratyphoid, but we must wait until we have made complete examinations to determine," he said.

Akin praised Dr. Henry M. Friedman the immigration doctor on the ship, for promptly reporting the illness aboard.

Girl Photographer Escapes Crossfire In Northern China

Shanghai, Aug. 27 (AP).—Lipstick and revolver side-by-side, wearing shorts and tramping through China's war-churned mud in high heels, Joy Lacks, special Associated Press photographer, returned here today from the North China battle fronts with pictures to be transmitted to America.

One of her narrow escapes came in the Battle of Nanyuan where, she said, Japanese forces, after inviting the Chinese for a conference, slaughtered unarmed Chinese soldiers in their barracks.

"Another photographer and I were shot at from both sides," she said.

A colored automobile thief was shot and killed by a District policeman last night after a zig-zag chase throughout Northwest Washington, where the driver's efforts to escape arrest imperiled the lives of children playing in the street.

The dead man, Walter Tempelman, 20, of the 1700 block of T street northwest, lay at the District Morgue early today, while Policeman E. L. McNale, who shot him and was catapulted from the automobile, was in Emergency Hospital with a fractured left knee and arm.

Policeman McNale, with Patrolman H. S. Montgomery, was on the lookout for a stolen automobile, reported taken from Mrs. Horace Hickam, of 2232 Decatur place northwest, earlier in the day.

He spotted the car at Twenty-second and N streets northwest and ordered the driver to halt. Instead, the colored man zig-zagged down the street at a reckless rate. McNale leaped upon the running board.

Tempelman, witnesses said, tried to beat the policeman off, at the same time driving crazily down the street. At Twenty-first and N streets, as the careening car approached a group of children, McNale, after pleading with the colored [illegible] stop, pulled his gun. He shot Tempelman through the heart.

The car ran wild after the shooting, and smashed into a parked automobile. McNale was thrown against another car.

More Thousands Surrender to Rebels as Santander Resistance Collapses

Bombs Blast 2 British Ships On North Coast

By the Associated Press.

Santander, Spain, Aug. 27.—All resistance to the insurgent conquest of Santander Province broke down today, thousands more disorganized government troops surrendering without firing a shot.

Like their comrades who gave up Santander, the straggling government forces remaining in the province capitulated readily to the advance guard of Gen. Francisco Franco's "mopping up" units.

Only Asturias Province, to the west of Santander, remains to be cleaned out by the insurgents.

Meanwhile, a strong government attack on the Aragon front threatened the salient driven into the Teruel sector some weeks ago by the insurgents.

Two British Boats Bombed.

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—Two British steamers were bombed today as they left Gijon, government-held port on the north Spanish coast, by war planes reported to belong to Spanish insurgents.

The admiralty said that one, the 4,533-ton African Trader, was en route to Bordeaux, France, despite several leaks in her hull. Two destroyers, the Fearless and Foresight, were standing by.

There was no information available on the fate of the other steamer, the 3,827-ton Marion Moller, the admiralty reported.

Informed sources here asserted "no international issue is involved because the ships were inside the port and not on the high seas."

Vatican Recognition.

Vatican City, Aug. 27 (AP).—Pablo de Churruca, Marquis of Aycenena, presented his credentials today as Spanish insurgent charge d'affaires to the Holy See. The formality emphasized the Vatican's "de facto" recognition of the Spanish insurgent regime.

Italy Lauds Twelve Generals.

Rome, Aug. 27 (AP).—Twelve Italian generals participating in the Spanish civil war were named tonight in a Giornale d'Italia dispatch which praised them for their "large" part in the insurgents' capture of Santander. Premier Mussolini also took occasion to acclaim the insurgent victory at Santander, a conquest which cost Italy 341 soldiers killed and 1,676 wounded.

Board Threatens To Use Subpenas To Trace Ballots

Newton, N. H., Aug. 27 (AP).—A Congressional committee investigating the loss of 34 ballots in last November's disputed election for Representative in the First District threatened today to subpena citizens unless they appeared voluntarily to say whether they voted.

On the committee's decision depends whether Arthur B. Jenks, of Manchester, holds his Congress seat or yields to Alphonse Roy (Democrat), also of Manchester.

Newton's checklist showed 458 persons cast ballots but only 424 ballots were found. Jenks claimed the missing ballots would clinch his claim to the seat, although a first recount ended in a tie and a second gave Roy the election by 17 votes. Upon a rehearing, Jenks was awarded the seat, but Roy's renewed protest brought a House resolution for a direct canvass of Newton voters.

Hitler Paper Again Assails Mundelein

Berlin, Aug. 27 (AP).—The organ of Adolf Hitler's storm troopers, Der S. A. Mann, again attacked George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, today.

The cardinal has called Hitler "a paperhanger" and has assailed Nazi Germany's campaign of putting Catholic priests on trial for "immorality" as a vicious type of atrocity propaganda.

Der S. A. Mann declared Cardinal Mundelein was "backing" a new motion picture which would depict monastery life. It "warned" him not to be "too hasty" because, it hinted, Germany is about to furnish "abundant new material" about life behind monastery walls. This was interpreted as a thinly veiled prediction of new trials of priests and lay brothers on Nazi accusations of immoral practices.

Duce's Visit to Hitler Planned in September

Politics and People

President, Who Stresses Lack of Judges, Has Himself Been Lax in Filling Vacancies.

By Franklyn Waltman

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in the statement he issued on signing the judicial procedural reform bill, indicated he has not yet abandoned his fight to add some justices to the Supreme Court. In order to bolster the argument for that undertaking, the President refers to the need for "speedy" justice and has a few words to say about congested court dockets.

The conductor of this column believes Mr. Roosevelt scored only once in that statement, and that was when he criticized the bill before him because "it provides no increase in the personnel of the lower courts—an increase confessedly necessary." Congress should have completed the job before it adjourned by creating additional judgeships in districts where the court dockets are a year or more behind. Congress postponed that task until its next session, creating only one district judgeship in the closing hours of the session for Ohio—where it was not particularly needed.

WALTMAN.

But in view of Mr. Roosevelt's record in permitting judicial vacancies to exist months—even for more than one year—he should be the last person in Washington to cry about the need for more personnel on the Federal bench. When he cleans up his record on that subject, he will be entitled to a hearing on the merits of his contentions.

* * *

Incredible as it may sound, Mr. Roosevelt let Congress adjourn—after all that has been said by him about the need for additional judges—without filling a vacancy in the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals which has existed since Judge Samuel Alschuler retired on May 15, 1936—one year and three months ago. And Judge Alschuler gave notice of his retirement on March 30, 1936, so that the President has had almost 17 months in which to find a suitable successor.

The trouble, it seems, is that the politicians of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, comprising the circuit, cannot agree on who should get this plum. It also is whispered that Senator Sherman Minton of Indiana would dearly love to get this life-long appointment at $12,000 a year, and that Mr. Roosevelt keeps it vacant in order to encourage the Senator as a hot New Dealer.

* * *

During the last session of Congress the President sent to the Senate 24 judicial appointments, including that of Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court. Of this total, 15 were to vacancies on the Federal bench which had existed more than three months. Eight of these appointments were to vacancies which had existed more than six months. Two were to vacancies which had existed for more than one year. It is an amazing record for a man who becomes so passionate about congestion in the courts.

* * *

There is given herewith President Roosevelt's record of judicial appointments during the last session of Congress, with the period between the appointment and the creation of the vacancy shown in parenthesis.

This is the record as to circuit court appointees.

John Biggs, jr., of Delaware, named to Third Circuit bench February 3 to fill place created by Congress June 24, 1936 (7 months, 10 days).

J. Earl Major, of Illinois, named to Seventh Circuit bench March 9 to succeed Judge Louis Fitzhenry, who died November 18, 1935 (15 months, 19 days).

William Healy, of Idaho, named to Ninth Circuit bench June 8, to fill place created by Congress April 14, 1937 (2 months, 24 days).

Albert Lee Stephens, of California, named to Ninth Circuit bench June 8 to fill place created by Congress April 14, 1937 (2 months, 24 days).

Robert Lee Williams, of Oklahoma, named to Tenth Circuit bench March 25 to succeed Judge George T. McDermott, who died January 19, 1937 (2 months, 6 days).

* * *

This is the record as to Federal District Court appointees:

Thomas C. Trimble, named to Eastern District of Arkansas June 17 to succeed John E. Martineau, who retired March 6, 1937 (3 months, 11 days).

Ralph E. Jenney, named to Southern District of California June 23 to succeed Judge Stephens, confirmed as circuit judge June 15 (8 days).

J. Leroy Adair, named to southern District of Illinois March 24 to succeed Judge Major, confirmed as circuit judge March 17 (7 days).

Mac Swinford named as additional judge for Eastern and Western districts of Kentucky August 19 to fill place created by Congress on June 22, 1936 (13 months, 28 days).

George F. Sullivan, named as district judge for Minnesota August 12 to succeed Judge Joseph W. Molyneaux, who retired February 28, 1937 (5 months, 15 days).

Sidney C. Mize, named to Southern District of Mississippi January 30 to succeed Judge Edwin R. Holmes, confirmed as circuit judge March 19, 1936 (10 months, 11 days).

John Caskie Collet, named to district of Missouri March 9 to fill place created by Congress on June 22, 1936 (8 months, 15 days).

Harold P. Burke, named to Western District of New York April 27 to succeed Judge Harlan W. Rippey, who resigned December 31, 1936, having been elected in November to the State bench (3 months, 27 days).

Frank LeBlond Kloeb, named to Northern District of Ohio June 18 to succeed Judge George P. Hahn, who died February 12, 1937 (4 months, 6 days).

Alfred P. Murrah, named additional judge for Eastern, North ern and Western Districts of Oklahoma February 8, to fill place created by Congress June 22, 1936 (7 months, 17 days).

Eugene Rice, named to Eastern District of Oklahoma August 3, to succeed Judge Williams, confirmed as circuit judge April 19, 1937 (3 months, 15 days).

Claude McColloch, named to district of Oregon August 5, to succeed Judge John H. McNary, who died October 25, 1936 (9 months, 11 days).

Here is the record as to appointments to Federal Courts in the territories and District of Columbia:

Charles Harwood, of New York, named district judge in Canal Zone, June 10, to succeed Richard C. P. Thomas, whose term expired June 1, 1937 (9 days).

Justin Miller, of North Carolina, named associate justice of United States Court of Appeals for District of Columbia, August 20, to succeed Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel, who died August 7 (13 days).

Hobart Newman, named judge of District of Columbia Police Court, July 27, to succeed Isaac R. Hitt, whose term expired March 17, 1937 (4 months 10 days).

Louis Le Baron, named first circuit judge of Hawaii, June 10, to succeed Norman D. Godbold, who died July 16, 1936 (10 months 24 days).

This record requires no further comment, except that it needs to be recalled whenever Mr. Roosevelt talks about the congested Federal Courts and the need for additional judges.

Special Session And Sugar Bill Still Uncertain

By Robert C. Albright.

The unused ink in a United States Senator's gift fountain pen last night held the fate of the unsigned but not yet vetoed sugar marketing control bill.

And the unpredictable trend of farm commodity prices held the secret of when Congress will meet again—whether in special session this fall or in regular session next January.

But only one man could answer these two last questions of the Congressional session—the President—and he hadn't made up his mind. His flourished veto, and the sugar bill would expire. A call from him, and Congress must return.

Sidetracks Question.

Senator Allen J. Ellender, of Louisiana, who wants the sugar bill signed, told the President so before his departure. The President said nothing. So Huey Long's diminutive former lieutenant drew his pen from his pocket.

"Mr. President," he said, "this pen was given to me when I came to the Senate. I used it to sign my oath of office. If you would just use it to sign the sugar bill, it would be really a historic pen. I would frame it."

There was a long pause, then the President said: "You wouldn't mind if I used it to veto the bill, would you, Allen?"

Another pause, and Ellender replied: "No, I guess not, but I won't frame the pen."

Schwartz Confident.

That incident only started more speculation in the rear guard.

"If I were to bet," said Senator H. H. Schwartz, of Wyoming, "I'd give odds we will have a bill."

Ellender was "hopeful," and so was Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho.

On Washington's only other burning issue, there was more speculation.

"I don't think we will be called back unless there is a serious break in commodity prices," said Senator Pope. "Even then I don't think we will be called before November 15."

But, said Senator Ellender:

"We should be called back as early as possible, certainly not later than November 15. It will take us at least 40 days to pass the new farm bill, and if he waits until January, there won't be a chance of making it effective in 1938."

Roosevelt Gives Clew.

Only one clew has been furnished by the President on his special session plans. He told members of the Senate Agriculture Committee planning roving hearings on the measure he hoped the hearings would terminate by November 1, it was learned last night.

That would give members a chance to draft the measure in time for a mid-November session.

Pope and other Senators believe the commodity market holds the answer. Should farm products encounter a price squall, a special session for speedy crop control action could be justified on "emergency" grounds. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics has warned "materially lower" wheat prices may develop unless world production in 1938 is again small or export demand increases.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst yesterday pointed out that "President Roosevelt had vetoed more bills than any other Chief Executive except Grover Cleveland," and added the President "should receive praise and approbation for the superb service to the people he has quietly rendered in protecting the public revenues by his vetoes."

Southern States Council Urges Wage Bill War

By Russell Smith

Alarm bells are calling Southern industry to new battle against the Black-Connery wage-hour bill, which House leaders have pledged will be pushed to a vote soon after Congress returns, it was learned here yesterday upon distribution of statements by the Southern States Industrial Council, of Nashville.

With the statement, John E. Edgerton, president of the council, inclosed a letter he has written "to the constituency" of the council praising the Seventy-fifth Congress "as forever distinguished in history for having repulsed the most daring attempts to destroy our Constitution and the democratic government established by it that were ever made," a reference, apparently, to the court bill.

The letter called upon "constituents" to return to Congress Senators and Representatives who "stood the test."

Seven Southern Senators are up for re-election in 1938, together with all members of the House. In addition, a new Senator will be elected in Alabama to the seat vacated by Hugo L. Black upon his appointment to the Supreme Court.

Edgerton's statement caused new speculation as to continuance in Democratic primaries of the civil conflict which shook the party during the recent session.

This speculation was encouraged by Edgerton's stress on the sectional issue, which was emphasized to such an extent as to call forth a denial it was involved in the wage-hour bill, on the part of Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Textile Workers.

"During the last few months of this session, while the notorious wages and hours bill was under consideration, our section, for particular reasons, has been harassed by the fear that its industrial future was going to be doomed by a further concentration of power in the hands of the Federal Government," said Edgerton.

He insisted the South does not seek industries which are exploiters of labor.

He warned business further, that "either industry must energetically devise some effective system of voluntary self-government, or submit inevitably to Government control."

The statement said "the vast number of unassimilated aliens in our country have enough friends in places of power to assure a continuation for the next few years of the harassments of un-American radicalism," and ended with a plea for Southern industry to unite on an alternative to the wage-hour bill before the next session of Congress.

Rumania Fears Revolt as Exile Prince Returns

By the United Press.

Vienna, Aug. 27.—Revolution was reported brewing tonight in Rumania with the return from exile of Prince Nicholas, banished brother of King Carol.

Diplomats said Nicholas' surprise flight to Bucharest from Italy was engineered by the Nazi Iron Guard, which has sought since 1933 to drive Carol from the throne because of his extramarital romance with red-headed Magda Lupescu.

The Iron Guard, outlawed by Carol, but still strong, is bitterly anti-Semitic, and Mme. Lupescu is said to be Jewish.

Minister of War C. Anglescu was reported to have resigned, and to have been replaced temporarily by Minister of Navy N. N. Irimescu.

Nicholas was stripped of his titles, became plain "Mr. Nicholas Brana" and fled to Vienna, thence to Italy, last April 26 after being denounced by his older brother.

He supposedly was ostracized because he married a commoner. But at the time of the young prince's expulsion it was evident that the real reason for the accusation lay in the ambitions of the Iron Guard to make Nicholas their dictator.

House Inquiry Into Absentee Vote Reported

'Major Scandal' in Ballots by Non-Present Members Is Rumored.

By the Associated Press.

Investigation is under way into reported recording of votes on House roll calls of Representatives known to have been out of town, one of the House leaders said yesterday.

He was unwilling to be quoted by name, but said there was "evidence of a major scandal." Legislators who were in other parts of the United States or in Europe, he said, have been listed as voting.

He added that House leaders were determined to fix responsibility.

Preliminary checks, he said, have disclosed perhaps half a dozen instances of illegitimate absentee voting.

Another individual holding a key House post said two members had asked him to have their votes cast on major bills while they were absent, but he had refused.

These leaders said it was "extremely dangerous" for a member to have his vote cast by another and could result in expulsion of both from Congress.

South Trimble, clerk of the House, last night denied an investigation is being made.

Soviet Arrests Noble's Ex-Wife In Poison Plot

Accused of Drugging Water on Trains; 32 Wreckers Are Executed.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 27.—Soviet Russia caught in its purge net today the former wife of a Polish nobleman accused of poisoning water pitchers on excursion trains and, in the Far East, executed 32 more persons for "wrecking" at the behest of the Japanese secret service.

Reports from the town of Novorossisk near Rostoff-on-Don told how the woman, one Wedenskaya, was caught and condemned to death after she had poured a lethal acid into the water pitchers, allegedly in a plot by "anti-Soviet enemies."

The 32 executions brought to 138 the two weeks total of executions in Siberia, where 34 were shot August 18, and 72 on August 12.

The executions were disclosed by the customary brief announcement in the Irkutsk newspaper, Eastern Siberia Pravda.

Farm Act Drafting Starts in November

By the Associated Press.

Members of the Senate Agriculture Committee said yesterday they would begin drafting general farm legislation early in November, in order to be prepared for a special session if one is called.

As soon as the sub-committees have completed public hearings in the West and South, they said, they will return to Washington.

Checker Champion's Miraculous Memory Traps Bootleggers as Well as Rival Experts

Harry Lieberman, a champion Washington checker player, smoked a black pipe at the Alcohol Tax Unit of the International Revenue Building yesterday and told how he catches bootleggers with the same mental calisthenics he uses playing checkers blindfolded.

Lieberman, who defeated three world champions in a checker match with Great Britain in 1927, said: "There's nothing magic about playing blindfold checkers, nothing mysterious at all. It's accomplished by training the memory, and it's almost exclusively will-power and concentration."

The same photographic mind which he trained to remember every checker on ten boards simultaneously has been trained to recall the tricks of hordes of tax-evaders.

"These tax-dodgers use the name Smith one day and Jones the next and move all over the country. Never can tell where they'll pop up, or under what name. My job is to recognize them by their methods," Lieberman said. "We can tell by the way they operate who they are."

Lieberman doesn't know how he got to playing checkers, but once he started he went for it in a big way. In less than ten years he was an international star, with his forte blindfolded rather than match play.

His memory is extraordinary. Just to prove his point, yesterday he recited at random 40 figures and then repeated them correctly in their proper order.

He likes checkers better than chess, though he plays both.

Four Perish as N. Y. Legislator's Plane Crashes After Radio Appeal

Rescue Craft Braves Fog to Reach Wreck

Assemblyman, Wife and 2 Others Are Killed After Asking Directions.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 27.—The bodies of four persons, including State Asemblyman Pritchard H. Strong, 31, of Rochester; his wife, Margaret, 30, and two male companions, were taken today from their wrecked airplane, hours after it crashed a mile from the Albany Airport.

Federal inspectors and State and county officials launched an investigation after a searching plane found the twisted wreckage.

The ship was piloted by Clarence Robinson, 33, Rochester. The fourth victim was Charles H. Judson, 40, investment counsel, also of Rochester.

Nosing down in a rain-soaked woodland after a 35-mile flight from Saratoga Springs, the ship bounced back and overturned, burying itself in the ground.

Only a few minutes before Strong's monoplane disappeared while trying to land at the airport this morning, a radio message asking directions was received from the pilot. Scarcely had the directions been given when an airport employe heard a "dull, sickening thud."

Search Abandoned For Victim of Bolt

Search for the body of Jefferson D. Donnahoe, Washington attorney who was killed by a lightning bolt Thursday while bathing near Kitty Hawk, N. C., was abandoned by the Coast Guard yesterday.

Coast Guard boats and an observation airplane patrolled the coast Thursday and yesterday until halted by threatening weather, the United Press reported.

Condition of Donnahoe's wife, stunned by the flash which killed her husband, yesterday was said to be improving.

Court Fight Jaunt Seen for President

dress at Green Bay, Wis., and describing it as the definition of the New Deal he liked best.

The irony of a Senator, author of such a definition, opposing the President on the court issue, would be equaled by the irony if the President turned such tactics against the Senator who previously had been assisted.

Victory for Bloc.

Decision to make the trip would be a victory for the President's more militant advisers.

Controversy has centered about the question of retaliation for Senators who had "deserted" on the court issue.

One view was that it would not be wise to attempt even indirect reprisals, particularly with respect to Senators O'Mahoney and Wheeler.

O'Mahoney, earlier this year was credited with opposition to the court bill solely on "grounds of conscience." To attempt to punish him might boomerang.

So far as Clark, McCarran and Burke are concerned, however, there is a disposition to refer to them as "coat-tail riders" who owe their election to Mr. Roosevelt's popularity.

First authoritative indication the President was considering such a trip followed the speech wherein Senator Joseph Guffey last week denounced opponents of the court bill by name. This was unprecedented action as he was chairman of the Democratic Congressional campaign committee.

Guffey's attack, within two days, was represented as "an authentic expression of feeling" in the inner White House circle.

These representations were followed by reports the President had been urged to make the trip.

Stabbed 9 Times; Killer Tried to Hurl Body Into Hell Gate.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 27.—The body of a well-dressed young woman was found trussed in a barrel on the Queens bank of the East River today.

The barrel evidently had been rolled over a 15-foot embankment near the Triborough Bridge in the hope that it would plunge into the swift currents of Hell Gate and be washed to sea.

It crashed against a rocky shelf 4 feet from the water's edge, however, and stuck there.

Medical Examiner Jacob Werne said the woman, a pretty brunette of about 30, possibly of Latin extraction, had been stabbed nine times with an icepick. The point of the weapon was found in the skull.

Dr. Werne said she had been dead only a few hours.

A tablecloth of the type commonly used in small restaurants was knotted around her body, leading detectives to express a theory she may have been a night club entertainer or habitue. Except for shoes, she was fully clothed.

In addition to the tablecloth, the body was trussed with a piece of wire from an automobile radio. The radio itself, which apparently had been tossed after the barrel, was found a few feet away. Detectives regarded it as an important clew.

Evangelist Slays Wife In Cross-Country Row

Linden, N. J., Aug. 27 (AP).—A Los Angeles farmer-evangelist confessed tonight, Prosecutor Abe J. David said, that he killed his wife, also a preacher, with a hammer after a quarrel lasting throughout an automobile trip across the continent.

Lloyd Pusey, 44, stepped from his car and told police "Here I am. I killed her," David said. His wife's body was found in the front seat. Pusey, David said, attributed the fatal quarrel to his discovery she had been married four times previously.

Mrs. Shelby Denies Murder of Taylor

Los Angeles, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Mrs. Charlotte Shelby denied today she killed William Desmond Taylor, the movie director who guided her daughter, Mary Miles Minter, to screen fame.

Mrs. Shelby was testifying in the $48,750 recovery suit of her second daughter, Mrs. Margaret Fillmore, who contended she once accepted $133,000 from her mother as compensation for "protecting" her in the Taylor case.

2 Payroll Bandits Sought by Police

Hospital Aide Held in 'Torso' Slaying of Ten

Discharged Assistant's Duty Was to Dissect Bodies for Autopsy.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—A three-year hunt for the maniacal torso slayer of ten persons brought into the hands of police tonight a discharged laboratory assistant who Detective Lieut. Blackwell said was "the most likely suspect" of the hundreds questioned.

Boasts to a drinking companion that he was expertly skilled in dissecting bodies led to the apprehension of the man, described as a 40-year-old, powerfully built mill worker.

Blackwell withheld the suspect's name pending developments. He said the man's duties at the hospital included dissection of bodies for autopsies. He was discharged, Blackwell said, after surgical instruments and formaldehyde were stolen.

Shortly, thereafter, in September, 1934, the first of the crazed killer's butchered victims was found.

Blackwell sent detectives into a cheap West Side rooming house district to hunt for what he said "may be the torso murder laboratory."

Dr. Samuel R. Gerber, coroner, has said he believed the killer was a sadist with a knowledge of anatomy, gained possibly as a doctor, nurse, butcher or hunter.

State Senator Posts Bail on Vice Charges

Baltimore Grand Jury Presentment Names Melvin Fine.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 27.—Melvin Fine, Baltimore's only Republican State Senator, was presented by the grand jury today on a charge he conspired to take two women to Annapolis during the last Legislature for the "purpose of prostitution, lewdness and assignation."

The presentment was returned in connection with the city grand jury's vice investigation here. The inquiry followed city-wide Federal raids several months ago. Presentments also were returned against two police officers on vice counts.

A presentment is a preliminary step toward an indictment and may or may not result in an indictment.

Sergt. Milton Andrew Hipsley, one of the two police officers presented, was charged with malfeasance in office by neglecting to suppress vice and prostitution. The other officer named was Sergt. August Bierman, charged with malfeasance in office.

Senator Fine was taken into custody at his office by Deputy Sheriff John Aires. He gained speedy freedom in bail, as did Sergt. Hipsley.

Senator Fine predicted his complete vindication, "if and when I am indicted."

The grand jury returned presentments against three other persons, none of them officials, in its drive against vice conditions. It also returned 37 indictments against persons previously accused.

Among those indicted was Police Lieut. Edward I. Hitzelberger, charged in two cases of bribery and in one case of malfeasance in office. Hitzelberger, named several months ago by witnesses in a Federal vice crusade here, already had been suspended.

Edison Wisdom Stored in File Saves Company

Knotty Question Asked Him Long Ago and Answer Preserved.

By the Associated Press.

West Orange, N. J., Aug. 27.—Thomas A. Edison, dead five years, made a decision two weeks ago which kept one of his largest manufacturing plants from shutting down.

The plant was the battery division of Thomas A. Edison, Inc. Nickel was found in its $40,000 worth of Swedish' iron, and no more was available.

A conference was called to consider whether the impurity ruined the iron for battery manufacture.

"How would 'you like to have Thomas A. Edison make the decision?" asked George E. Stringfellow, vice president.

In 1926, he said, while Edison was consultant for the battery company, Stringfellow told him:

"You invented this battery. In your mind there is information about it that no one else has. Will you let the staff give you written questions about the battery?"

Edison agreed. Over week-ends he penciled answers to 87 questions before he died.

They were filed away and forgotten by nearly everyone except Stringfellow.

"If there is nickel in iron," Stringfellow had asked, "does it adversely affect the life of the cell?"

The cell is part of a battery.

"No harm," Edison wrote.

Roosevelt Signs Army Housing Bill

Frederick Opper Dies at 80; Happy Hooligan's Creator

By the Associated Press.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Heart disease brought death today to Frederick Burr Opper, 80, creator of Happy Hooligan, Alphonse and Gaston, and other comic strip characters read around the world.

He was forced by failing eyesight a few years ago to retire from active work for newspapers with which he had been connected since 1899.

Born in Madison, Ohio, the son of an Austro-Hungarian immigrant, Opper left school at 14 to work on the Madison Gazette, a weekly newspaper. A year later he went to New York.

When he submitted some of his sketches to magazines they were promptly purchased. Then Col. Frank Leslie hired him as a staff artist for Leslie's weekly. Three years later he went to Puck, with which he remained until engaged for the New York Journal.

With the rise of the syndicate system, his cartoons were circulated throughout the world.

Opper for many years was an outstanding political cartoonist, during the McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt campaigns his "Willie and Teddy" series had the Nation roaring.

7-Yr.-Old Boy Lashed to Death By Housekeeper, Police Charge

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 27.—The woman who blamed two neighborhood "bullies" for the brutal beating which caused the death of 7-year-old Leonard Macali was suddenly arrested today and accused by police of having administered the fatal blows.

Booked on a charge of manslaughter preferred by Deputy Chief John Haller, Mrs. Esther Brodsky, 36, housekeeper for the boy's father, denied the allegation and clung to her story, police said, that "Blondie" and "Brownie" were responsible.

Haller said the dead boy's brother, Richard, 9, who also told police he saw the "bullies" beat Leonard, finally told questioners it was the housekeeper he saw. He was afraid to tell the truth at first, Haller quoted him as saying, because the woman threatened to beat him.

The woman has been housekeeper for Michael Mcali, he said, since the death of Macali's wife when Leonard was a baby.

Restoration Group Seeks Brick Wall For Early Church

Memorial gifts to erect a brick wall around old Lambs Creek Church, Brunswick Parish, Va., are sought by a restoration committee headed by Archdeacon W. Roy Mason, of Charlottesville.

The church was erected in 1768-70 to succeed the Muddy Creek Church of 1700 and is one of the few original colonial churches standing. It was abandoned after the Revolution but restored in 1826 for services, which continued until the Civil War.

It was used as a stable during that conflict, pews and pulpit being destroyed. It was restored later and used until many of the families supporting it moved away.

Mrs. Leland Stanford Connes, 1332 Massachusetts avenue northwest, is executive secretary of the committee.

First Degree Charge Sought in 'Date' Killing

Richmond, Ind., Aug. 27 (AP).—A first degree murder indictment will be sought against Hollys Sagester, 16, held in the slaying yesterday of Martha Markey, 14. Sagester allegedly admitted shooting the girl after she made a date with another boy.

Two Boys Who Try To Rob Cab Driver Cornered in Alley

Cornered in a dead-end alley on P street after a chase by citizens, two youths accused of attempting to rob a cab-driver were captured by Seventh Precinct police last night.

The driver, Henry Stanley, 26, of 1528 Trinidad avenue northeast, pulled his cab to the curb on Wisconsin avenue near O street and shouted to bystanders for help. The two youths leaped from the vehicle and ran up Wisconsin avenue to P street.

Stanley was treated at Georgetown University Hospital for injuries received, he told police, when one of the youths struck him over the head with a beer-bottle.

Mellon Nephew Likely to Rule Money Empire

Financiers Believe Scepter Will Pass to Bank President.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 27.—Andrew W. Mellon will come home to the city of his fortune tomorrow.

A special funeral train carried the body of the former Secretary of the Treasury from Southampton, N. Y., where the city's greatest philanthropist since the days of Andrew Carnegie died last night.

The only member of the immediate family not on the train was Richard King Mellon, the nephew who, financial circles predicted, will now head the family's vast financial empire.

News of Mr. Mellon's death was carried by airplane from Alaska to a little island off the coast where the nephew is vacationing from his duties as president of the Mellon National Bank.

The Rev. Stuart Nye Hutchisson, pastor of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church, will conduct the funeral, in the $3,000,000 church built by the Mellon family.

The special train will reach here tomorrow bringing the financier's son, Paul, and his wife; Mr. Mellon's daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. David E. K. Bruce; Mrs. R. B. Mellon and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Magee Scaife.

The funeral services will be public, but simple, representatives of the family said, in accordance with the wishes of the man who remained always shy despite his great wealth.

Find Woman Shot In Flaming Home

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 27.—Neighbors found Mrs. Sarah Staub, 63-year-old Daysville farm woman, lying in a muddy lane near her blazing home early today suffering from a bullet wound inflicted under strange circumstances.

A bullet had been fired through her body, entering the abdomen and coming out at the back. Her home, where she lived with her 40-year-old son, Guy F. Staub, a Lewistown bartender, was in flames when the neighbors found her about 5 a. m.

Sheriff Roy B. Hiltner said he had been unable to find out who fired the bullet or how the cabin fire started.

The sheriff said Mrs. Staub, in a critical condition at the Frederick County Hospital, refused to talk.

The officers vainly questioned her son and her estranged husband, William D. Staub, about 70, for several hours.

Guy Staub, the son, said a rain-swept road had prevented him from spending the night at his mother's home.

Public Debt Passes 37-Billion Mark

By the Associated Press.

The public debt passed $37,000,000,000 August 25.

A Treasury report yesterday showed the debt climbed $51,734,110 on that date to $37,021,303,409.

The increase resulted largely from a $50,000,000 issue of discount bills to bolster the Treasury's cash.

Chemist Will Demonstrate Pill 'Certain' to Prevent Drowning

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 27 (AP). Paul Pisculli announced today that drowning hereafter is going to be next to impossible, provided susceptible citizens swallow the pills he has invented.

Pisculli, a chemist whose brother, Dr. Leon Pisculli, went down when the American Nurse failed in a transatlantic flight attempt, will demonstrate here tomorrow. His nephew, Gens Tortariello, 24, of Neptune, N. J., will take a pill and a deep breath and plunge into the ocean.

He will swim around for quite a spell, Pisculli said, to prove that he cannot—or maybe can—drown.

If Tortariello is still in circulation after the test, Pisculli will begin considering ways and means for marketing his pills. He said they would be "very, very expensive."

The chemist said the pill absolutely stymies fatigue for 20 hours and prevents cramps.

'Hidden Deals' Charge Denied By Comptroller

Another is that the Comptroller disposed of a $500,000 Virginia apple orchard for $15,000 at private sale. A suit is pending in the District Court on this charge, and the Comptroller's office prefers not to make its answer public until the proper time.

In a 24-page memorandum, the Comptroller's office went at length into the Atlantic City banking situation. The statement minced no words. In discussing the causes of the collapse, in which five out of six national banks and three out of ten State banks and trust companies fell, it stated:

"A study of the records of the four national banks which now make up the three receiverships, viz., the Chelsea National Bank, the Second National Bank, the Atlantic City National Bank and the Union National Bank, indicates that their management was neither particularly astute nor free from speculative inclinations."

Primary causes for the Atlantic City debacle were described as operations of banks on extended scale in nonliquid condition; use of the banks "too freely" by directors; huge loans to directors and their outside interests while the bank was borrowing freely at the same time, and increasing of surplus by increasing the value at which the banks' buildings and furniture were carried.

"Banking Speculative."

"It is seen, therefore," said the statement, "that banking in Atlantic City had long since come to be speculative in nature, the purpose being not so much to supply a legitimate banking service . . . as to afford a means of substantial profit through sales and purchases of stocks in banks and allied concerns."

The year 1928, according to the report, was the peak year for Atlantic City banks. The six national and ten State and trust companies had total capital and surplus of $12,840,590; total receipts of $59,727,690, and total loans and discounts of $47,726,170.

One national bank, the Boardwalk National, remains in the city today.

The statement pointed out that when withdrawals became acute in 1931, prominent local citizens publicly urged consolidation of all the weak banks as a "solution" of the problem, with, according to the statement, "considerable publicity and largely in the nature of a Chamber of Commerce or other civic enterprise."

Increased Runs.

Instead of boosting public faith, depositors increased their rush to withdraw, causing an enormous drainage of about $30,000,000. Since further withdrawals could be met only by borrowing money, the banks rushed to get loans from the Federal Corporation. The statement said that the banks' remaining assets were "so undesirable in nature" that considerable margain of face value was required.

Thus, substantially all of the assets of the banks which went into receivership were pledged to the lending agencies of the Government, it was noted.

Through this long and technical dissertation the Comptroller's office endeavored to show that the amount shown in receivers' quarterly statements as "cash on hand" is not actually "free" cash and can not be distributed generally until legal rights are established.

The statement defended the right of the RFC to sell colllateral to its obligations "as its perfect legal right," although note was made of "a great storm of protest, with both the RFC and this office the subjects of much abuse and vituperative attacks."

A statement was quoted from an anonymous Atlantic City banker to the effect that the lending agencies which supported the doomed banks "may too eventually take some losses out of the Atlantic City situation. . . . The agencies loaned many more millions proportionately to the merit of the collateral than they did to some other sections."

The statement charged that "large debtors have maneuvered in many cases successfully to evade the payment of their just obligations . . . The receivers have been hampered and hamstrung at almost every turn in their efforts to convert this wreckage into cash."

Sales Fully Public.

In meeting the charge that the Comptroller's office had privately sold $175,000 of hotel equipment for $10,000, the statement made full answer that the original cost of the equipment was but $25,000; that the sales were fully public; that two appraisals showed the value separately at $10,250.95 and $9,600; and that the sale, after allowances to the realty owner, was made for $8,567.13.

The details of the sale show that it concerned night-club furniture chiefly; with items ranging from welsh-rarebit dishes, cocktail glasses and oyster forks to babies' high-chairs, nutcrackers, used tablecloths and those small wire stands in which waiters insert cards reading "Reserved."

The defense against the apple orchard charge—that the Comptroller sold a $500,000 Virginia orchard for $15,000 privately—is just as complete and detailed as is the defense against the assertions of hidden dealings, costly to the citizenry, in the Atlantic City bank situation, the Comptroller's office assured The Post. However, the answer must await completion of a brief answering a recent suit making this same charge in the District Court.

Science Churches Announce Subject

"Christ Jesus" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from John 5:22,23: "The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son: that all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God." (Mark 10:18).

'Suppose' to Be Topic For Rev. Ward Smith

The Rev. Ward Smith will preach at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow morning at the Memorial United Brethren Church, using as his theme "Suppose." He will also have charge of the evening service, at which the discussion topic will be "Standing Up for the Rights of Others." The hour is 7:30 o'clock.

The official board will meet Thursday evening at 8:30 following a devotional service at 8.

'Spiritual Altitude' to Be Topic Of Dr. T. H. MacLeod Tomorrow

Mrs. Ruby Zwinglas to Be Soloist at Metropolitan Presbyterian; Other Churches Announce Services.

Dr. T. H. MacLeod, who is filling the pulpit of the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church during the absence of Dr. Freeley Rohrer, pastor, will speak on the subject, "Spiritual Altitude," tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Mrs. Ruby Zwinglas, member of the church choir, will be soloist during this service.

Thursday evening at 7:30 there will be a further study of books of the Old Testament.

Covenant First. The Rev. Dr. Ernest L. McCartney will occupy the pulpit tomorrow, using as his topic "Seeing the Unseen."

There will be a Sunday school class for adults and one for children at 10 a. m., followed by the morning service at 11 a. m.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University, will be the guest speaker at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow. He will speak at the morning worship at 11 o'clock and will deliver the meditation at the vesper hour at 8 o'clock.

The Church Bible School meets at 9:30 a. m., with classes and departments for all ages.

The young people of the Christian Endeavor Society meet each Sunday evening at 6:45 in the lecture room.

Thursday evening at 8 o'clock the Rev. George H. Cook will deliver the meditation at the mid-week prayer service.

Gunton-Temple. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. Bernard Braskamp, will preach at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow on "The Christian Graces."

Westminster Memorial. The pastor, the Rev. Harry V. Porter, will lead the morning worship service at 11 o'clock and preach on the topic, "Witnesses of the Wonders of His Grace."

Church of the Pilgrims. "Therefore Arise, Go" will be the subject of the 11 a. m. sermon tomorrow, the Rev. Howard C. Cobbs, associate pastor, announces. Mr. Cobb will preach also at the 8 o'clock evening service, on "We Are Fools for Christ's Sake."

Bible school for all members of the family will be at 9:45 a. m. The Young People's Society will have its regular vesper service at 6 p. m. A light supper will be served. All young people are invited to attend.

"The Prayer of Our Loard" will be the topic upon which Mr. Cobbs will preach at the 8 p. m. Thursday prayer service. This is the last of eight sermons of which the general theme is Prayer.

D. S. Wheelwright Mormon Organist

D. Sterling Wheelwright, M. Mus., A. A. G. O., has just arrived from Salt Lake City to succeed the late Edward P. Kimball as chapel director and concert organist at the Latter Day Saints Chapel, Sixteenth street and Columbia road. He has resumed the public organ recitals held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 8 p. m.

Wheelwright is a graduate of the Northwestern University School of Music and served for two years as organ recitalist at the university. He is an associate in the American Guild of Organists and has played at Orchestra Hall, Chicago, and at various universities and chapels in the Middle West.

In 1929 he became managing editor of the national Educational Music Magazine, Chicago, leaving that post and his university associations to become church music supervisor for the Mormon Church, with headquarters in Salt Lake City.

Bishop Hughes Is Celebrating Golden Jubilee

Entered Iowa Conference in 1887; to Receive Special Honors.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, head of that communion in this area and acting senior bishop, is this year celebrating the golden jubilee of his admission into the ministry of the church.

Bishop Hughes was received on trial as a minister in the old Iowa Conference of his denomination in September, 1887. This year, Bishop Hughes, for the week beginning September 14, will preside over the Iowa-Des Moines Conference meeting in First Church, Newton, Iowa. The Iowa-Des Moines Conference is the successor to the original Iowa Conference. Iowa Methodists will give Bishop Hughes special honors during the conference session.

He was ordained elder in 1892 and held pastorates in Iowa and in Massachusetts, serving some of the most prominent churches of the denomination. He was president of DePauw University in Greencastle, Ind., from 1903 to 1908 and was elected bishop at Baltimore in 1908.

Bishop Hughes has held distinguished posts in his own church and in American Protestantism. He was acting president of Boston University in 1923 and is president of the Board of Temperance Prohibition and Public Morals of his church.

Navy Contract Let.

A contract, valued at $2,790,875, for construction of a new graving dock at Mare Island Navy Yard, Vallejo, Calif., has been awarded to the George Pollock Co., Sacramento, Calif., the Navy Department announced yesterday. Contracts for construction of a destroyer tender and a seaplane tender will be received November 17.

Rev. I. H. Dugan Begins Service In Washington

New Associate to Preach at Christian Church Tomorrow.

The Rev. Ivan H. Dugan, the new associate minister at the National City Christian Church, will preach his initial sermon tomorrow morning. He has selected as his theme, "Rediscovering the Church." Mr. Dugan is also minister of religious education. He will devote much of his time to young people's work. He came here last month from Oklahoma where he was awarded master's and divinity degrees from Phillips University. Mr. and Mrs. Dugan are living at 1309 Concord street northwest.

Miss Virginia Sellars, of Baltimore, soprano soloist, will be guest soloist tomorrow morning. Miss Sellars held the Snellenberg Vocal Scholarship for three years of study at the Peabody Conservatory of Music. She is continuing her studies and serves a Baltimore church as regular soloist.

Third. The Rev. W. M. LaRoche will be guest preacher at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow morning. The Lord's Supper will be administered.

A Special Session?

President Roosevelt has left Washington for a three weeks' stay at Hyde Park without either affirming or denying a report that he plans to call a special session of Congress this fall. His delay in making any announcement strengthens the hope that the legislators will be permitted to relax and then to prepare for the arduous work of the regular session beginning in January.

So far as domestic problems are concerned there is clearly no need for a special session of Congress this fall. It can be appreciated that a Chief Executive whose prestige has been affected by Congressional delay in passing Administration measures would like to overcome the opposition or inertia that has defeated his plans. But it is all too probable that Congressional resistance would be stiffened by a command to plunge into a new legislative battle before the smoke of the past conflict has cleared away.

All of the arguments advanced in favor of adjournment this month remain as arguments against calling a special session. Time is needed to study the various complicated measures remaining on the President's list of unfinished business. And there is nothing on that list so urgent that it cannot wait until January, as well as until November, for action. Only in the event of very serious complications arising from the Far Eastern crisis would a convocation of the Legislature ahead of schedule seem advisable.

If there is genuine and general advocacy of the domestic proposals advanced by the President he can well afford to wait until Congress reassembles in accordance with the normal calendar. Moreover, measures launched under pressure are inevitably received by a portion of public opinion with skepticism, to say nothing of the fact that they are less likely to be subject to the careful scrutiny expected from a responsible legislative body.

Pressure tactics may be defensible in a crisis; but they cannot be justified when there is no emergency and, so far as the public is concerned, no apparent necessity to speed up legislative processes.

The Trend In Trolleys.

Washingtonians got two breaks this week—cooling rains and stream-lined streetcars. The latter represent a permanent gain. Twenty similar up-to-date cars were put on the rails two years ago, so a part of the riding public already knows the comfort of quieter and quicker transportation. The next few months will see the addition of 45 more of these trolleys. Soon the old cars, not the new ones, will be attracting attention.

More than any other means of mechanical transportation, the streetcar has been backward in acquiring grace and easy acceleration. Poorly ventilated, noisy, slow, jerky in motion, the trolley has been regarded more or less as a necessary evil. The cars which appeared here in 1935 went a long way toward breaking down this passenger prejudice locally. The handsome new models, some of which were put into usage here last night, should do even more in building popularity for trolley transportation, thereby incidentally helping to relieve the serious traffic problem.

It's pleasant to know, of course, that the color scheme of these new cars was selected with an eye to restfulness and that the old gong will henceforth be a "more melodious bell." But the chief interest in these trolleys lies in the fact that they are designed primarily for comfort, speed and quiet. For its solicitude in uniting these often conflicting virtues the Capital Transit Co. may properly take a bow to long and sustained community applause.

Bores Within.

A few choleric citizens will no doubt suffer increased blood pressure from the assertion of David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, that Communists should be admitted to union membership as long as "they are not destructive."

From a more tolerant outlook the move seems overdue. Today there are few finishing schools, literary clubs and cocktail parties which cannot boast of at least a few Communists. A place must be found for those of the persuasion that don't spend all their time in parlors. Why should the trade unions alone discriminate against them?

As Mr. Dubinsky says: "If the employers hire Communists to work for them, then we certainly should take them into our unions and let them work for the good of labor." In his own union Mr. Dubinsky has disciplined the reds hard and successfully. The charge made by certain politicians during the past campaign that he was only a stooge for Moscow was pretty thoroughly shown up as first-class bunk.

Possibly the presence of Communists within union ranks involves the danger that they may "bore from within." The danger that they will proves bores within is much more real. Oil and water mix much more easily than Communism and work. Indeed the only trouble we foresee in Mr. Dubinsky's program is more publicity for the row between the 57 varieties into which the comrades are now split.

Andrew W. Mellon.

The long life span of Andrew W. Mellon, dead at the age of 82, bridged two great and contrasting epochs in American history. It was this circumstance which explains why, at the summit of prosperity, his reputation was portrayed in such effulgent colors and why, with the advent of the depression, he became the target of much vague and meaningless abuse.

The extravagant acclaim which he received in the middle twenties of this century and the violent attacks to which he was subjected in more recent years were both exaggerated. He was neither the titan nor the demon of the picture. He was merely an honest, conscientious and courageous product of his times.

Andrew Mellon grew up in a period when America was absorbed, to the exclusion of many finer values, in the task of exploiting its seemingly endless resources and doing so on a scale unparalleled in history. There were vast rewards for those who knew how to play the game and Mr. Mellon was one of them. Possessed of great business acumen and vision, he helped build a vast structure of industrial enterprise. As the country prospered this leader prospered, too. Until his entry into public life far less known than the other great industrial empire builders of his time, Mr. Mellon actually belonged in the first rank.

Inevitably he carried into governmental service the same economic philosophy he had upheld as an industrialist. That philosophy, with its emphasis on the welfare of big business as the key to national prosperity, had helped make the United States the wealthiest and most powerful nation on earth. Prosperity at the top of the industrial pyramid, it was his firm conviction, meant prosperity for all.

As Secretary of the Treasury Mr. Mellon inherited what, for its day, was a staggering national debt. In a comparatively few years he cut it by one-third, meanwhile introducing a thoroughgoing budget system to help maintain the balance between expenditure and income. Although often accused of favoritism to wealth, his constant emphasis was on lessening the tax load on earned income as opposed to profits. And almost from the outset of his tenure he sought to close the loophole of tax-exempt securities.

The "Mellon myth" was not of his own creation. He never laid claim to the extravagant title of "the greatest Secretary of the Treasury since Alexander Hamilton." Actually, he was far too wise to consider himself an Ajax who could defy the lightning of economic forces and by a fiat keep the curve of business prosperity steadily moving upward. If he gave the impression of believing that American prosperity was permanent, millions of his fellow Americans believed it with him. The day of disillusionment had then not dawned, and with it the reduction to more modest proportions of Mr. Mellon's reputation as a miracle worker.

Personally, Andrew Mellon was the soul of modesty, a sensitive, ascetic and cultured gentleman endowed with a far larger measure of public-spiritedness than was ever shown by many of his critics. This was manifested, toward the close of his life, in his munificent bequest to the United States Government for the establishment of an art gallery here in Washington to house the superb treasures which, with a connoisseur's skill, he had assembled over a period of many years.

It had previously been displayed in the establishment of the Mellon Institute in Pittsburgh and in many other public benefactions. These bequests indicated a belief that the fortune which he had accumulated was to a large part his in trust. Together with his faithful service in high office, they constitute a generous and laudable gesture from one who recognized that great wealth bears with it great obligations.

And Now The Health Budget.

The third startling departmental budget estimate for 1939 has been received by the District Commissioners. Dr. Ruhland, the city health officer, asks $3,416,655 for the next fiscal year. This would be a 54 per cent increase over the current health appropriation. The Education and Welfare departments have already requested 50 and 63 per cent increases respectively. The Police Department, asking a 10 per cent increase, and the Fire Department, actually cutting last year's appropriation, are pleasant contrasts.

Basing its increased application principally on its patently inadequate physical plant, the Board of Education's budget was sympathetically received. So, too, was that of the Welfare Department, which showed that curtailment of WPA must be offset by more liberal relief in the communities.

The Health Department's arguments for a larger appropriation are not less compelling. For the doctors declare they can improve the city's disgraceful health record if given the money they ask. With Washington's 1936 death rate at 14.69 per 100,000 (whites, 12.47; Negroes, 20.62) as compared with a national average in 1935 of 10.92, the logic of their request is apparent.

The attack would concentrate on the preventable diseases, particularly tuberculosis, syphilis and pneumonia. The death rates for these three in the District is almost twice as high as over the country generally. If they could be brought down to the national average, according to Dr. Ruhland, a good part of Washington's battle would be won. To this end, he proposes to complete the Glenn Dale tuberculosis sanitaria, build a second polyclinic, increase the Gallinger Hospital and public nursing staffs, and expand the child hygiene clinics.

But all this would mean that the District would have to spend $1,208,000 more on health next year. Can it be done? The answer takes the form of another question. Can the District afford not to? For several years now Washington has been postponing health disbursements with the result that this year its expenditures average only 97 cents per capita, whereas $2.50 per capita is the recommendation of public health experts.

This economizing has seriously undermined the health of the Capital. And economy at the expense of health is never real economy.

An Offer Accepted.

Hungary's decision to pay a small sum on war debt account is, as the Department of State points out, gratifying for two reasons.

First, it is concrete evidence that substantial progress toward economic recovery has been made by one of the most severely handicapped of European nations. Hungary has experienced more than her share of territorial losses, political upheavals and economic hardships. Forced in 1931 to suspend transfers upon interest payments due to foreign creditors, arrangements have recently been made for partial resumption of such payments to private investors. Now Hungary has voluntarily agreed to transfer limited payments on her indebtedness to the United States Government.

This recognition of an obligation to resume payment on an intergovernmental contract as ability to pay revives is the second reason why the Administration feels grateful to Hungary.

One of the most unfortunate results of the wholesale defaults on war debts owing to our Government has been the attendant shock administered to investment confidence. Long before outright defaults became the rule it was apparent to all clear-headed students of the problem that the burden of those debts was intolerably heavy. It was not in our interest to insist upon payment nor was it within the capacity of the debtors to make payment in accordance with the terms of the debt-funding agreements.

However, it was hoped that some radical modification of the debt contracts could be made which would prevent them from being broken. Unfortunately, that was not done. Today, quite apart from the ban imposed by the Johnson act upon loans to defaulting governments, the defaults stand as a barrier to resumption of international lending to private as well as governmental borrowers.

The arrears on war debt payments have now reached a sum approximating $1,500,000,000, with the lion's share of that total owing by France and Great Britain. The contrast between this huge figure and the tiny sum to be paid by Hungary emphasizes the folly of supposing that we shall ever obtain more than a bare fraction of the payments due us under the debt-funding contracts.

However, Hungary's action may prod a few debtor nations into paying something on account to this Government as their ability to discharge private obligations increases. A good credit standing depends upon a reputation for keeping faith with creditors, whether they happen to be private individuals or governments. Hungary has shown a commendable desire to restore her credit by making no distinction in this respect, although no immediate advantage will be derived from resuming payments on the war debt.

It is highly desirable, of course, that the United States should be reminded by Hungary's action of the folly of insisting upon payments that are beyond the capacity of debtors to meet. A tiny bit of a loaf is better than no bread at all, as the State Department tacitly admits in expressing "gratification" over Hungary's offer.

Somebody's always trying to take the joy out of life. Now a German physician is experimenting with serums in an effort to find a cure for laziness.

The Cost Of Absent-Mindedness.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

It has become quite the thing in this ledger-minded age to count the cost of our national fads, foibles and shortcomings. Well, the Federal Reserve Board has a kind of financial measure of absent-mindedness. It is $189,000,000 and it applies to 5,500,000 people.

That is the sum of the forgotten accounts in American banks and the number of persons in whose names they stand. There aren't that many professors in the country. So, it is plain that, while we associate scholarship and absent-mindedness, there must be a whale of a lot of more mundane folk who have the same failing.

While the number of forgetters seems large, the real surprise comes in revelation of the size of some of the accounts. Most of them are small, but there are about a thousand for amounts ranging between $10,000 and $50,000 and 65 for more than $50,000. To persons who struggle with the problem of making monthly income balance with monthly bills, it will seem incredible that anybody can overlook so important a sum as $10,000, not to mention $50,000, which to many is a fortune "beyond the dreams of avarice"—until they get it.

Washington Parks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This letter is an added protest to those recently published in The Post about the rotting and destruction of our beautiful park trees and shrubs. The parks of our National Capital are decidedly a disgrace compared with those of Europe, South America, or even Turkey or Egypt. I wonder when we will wake up to it.

Once upon a time, before we had ever heard of those alphabetical combinations such as the WPA, PWA, etc., we used to have beautiful scenery at Pierce Mill in Rock Creek Park. Then, one of our political geniuses conceived the bright idea that due to the shortage of flour mills in the country, and in order to provide flour for the needy and hungry of the National Capital, it would be well to restore an old flour mill driven by water power which used to be there about five generations ago. And so he fell upon the magnificent idea of destroying that part of Rock Creek Park, divert the stream, dig out a nice deep trench, and erect a gigantic wheel requiring a miniature Niagara to propel it. And that's how a "picturesque" grist mill started in Rock Creek Park. A lovely public scene has been converted into one of destruction and desolation.

Lafayette Park used to be a haven for hot days with the beautiful shade trees all around. The New Deal planted in it some artistic square metal strips so that pedestrians may trip on them as they take the turns round the path. That park now looks a mess.

The sin of destroying those beautiful trees on the Ellipse will forever remain a blot on the overzealous activity of the New Deal public works program. And now, we find Secretary Ickes demanding the Nation to grant the President bigger and greater power, and for the Secretary of the Interior to assume a still greater authority to run the Nation's resources. May God forbid it.

Safe Driver Stickers?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent our ever-present traffic campaign, why not invite the public to help publicize it? And why not do a little exploiting of the fellow who is worthy and wants to help? Adherents of the NRA bragged: "We do our part." Drivers with clear records and who are willing to always follow the Golden Rule on the road could be invited to wear stickers in their cars indicating that they are trying to set a good example.

Numerous and varying insignia such as "Let's give the cops less work," "Yours for safer highways," etc., would be good publicity and a splendid check on the fellow who was courageous enough to display them. CLARA LOUISE LESLIE.

The War In China.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations again on your editorial, "Toward a Far Eastern Policy"—clear thinking and vigorous writing. You are helping to shape policy by such editorials.

What more can be done to make it clear to America and to the world that Japan is the aggressor? The report of the Lytton Commission and League verdict did that, but people in 1937 need to be reminded. The League might take action again or the signatories of the Nine Power Treaty might consider the effect of this struggle upon that treaty. Japan and China would have to make statements and whether the nine powers took a formal vote or not Japan would stand self-condemned, it seems to me.

But even if action by the League or the nine powers is difficult what can America, England and France do? Does not Stimson's attempt in 1932 give a point of departure? I believe that America, England and France together (and any other of the 1922 treaty signatories that would be willing to join) could put enough economic pressure upon Japan to curb her militarism and make impossible her plans for the conquest of Asia. Just how that economic pressure is to be exerted is a matter for serious study. But without some such pressure good will for China and opposition to Japan's military adventures among the people of America and England will accomplish little.

It is important to keep raw materials from reaching Japan now, but many business interests would oppose any kind of embargo and there would be opposition too to voluntary boycott of Japanese goods or refusal at the docks to load and unload Japanese ships. America will have to pay the price for any concrete expression of her disapproval of Japanese imperialism. So far most Americans do not realize the significance of this Far Eastern struggle for America and for the future peace of the world.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have become intensely interested in the present Asiatic situation and have perused every article appearing on your editorial page since its inauguration. I lack three months of being of age for an initial draft, and I am one of the many youths remaining in the country—though many doubt there are such—who will stand by my country "right or wrong."

Even so, I read with alarm the excited comments of certain persons who have contributed to your page lately and who advocate carrying on a defensive war for China in direct opposition to Japan. I feel that the United States should not give one inch of their present stand in regard to either of the belligerents, but at the same time I hope that our Nation will not employ the use of arms one way or the other in China or any other country for that matter.

It is with this plea that I ask you to continue your present brilliant editorials in favor of our present stand. H. C. K.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer has listened in to a radio talk from a gentleman living in our next door neighbor State—Nevada. If I understand it right his name is Pitman. In his statement he compared the case of Italy and Ethiopia with that of Japan and China. The gentleman from Nevada must not have visited these places to see the conditions for himself, or hadn't studied his history, or was like the man who had never traveled a mile from a "chicken coop."

Ethiopia was a black jungle wilderness and desert—the people have been owned as slaves by a mixture of black-and-yellow skinned emperor. Himself, his daughter and his son-in-law owned those uncivilized and unfortunate people. Ninety-five per cent of them never saw an automobile until Italy brought some in there a year or two ago—they didn't even know what a horse and wagon was. Now they are getting trained as mechanics and all kinds of tradesmen, and modern farmers—the children are going to school and adults going to mass on Sunday. That's that!

Now for Japan and China—China was civilized and advanced in the line of art and other learning when that little spot on the map called Japan—her people were down on all fours going to the seashore, eating periwinkles and seawee', but Perry's blunder made them walk on two, and ever since they have been grabbing their neighbor's territory on the Pacific. They should have gone to the jungles of Africa if they wanted to expand.

"Hopeless Road Ahead."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: More and more I am confused by our political, social and economic order. I am more than confused—I am discouraged.

I believe my case is typical of thousands, even here in Washington. Having been uprooted from my position in 1933, I turned to Government work for the reason that no other employment was available. Being well trained in executive and administrative work in private business, Government employment has never appealed to my tastes and talents.

Through these years I have made every reasonable effort to find other employment. Though well educated, a hard and consistent worker, the shadow of "past 45" has apparently stood in the way. Positions have gone to younger men—men without families, carefree and in most instances without experience.

Now that my services in Government work have been terminated, just a blank and hopeless road lies ahead. My several years spent in high school and college fail to sustain, while the laboring man with limited education, is in demand and is willing to strike for a higher wage.

With ambition, willingness, training and a natural aggressiveness, I see my family nearing the last meal. I ponder, I pause, to understand what it is all about. A society that demands honorable citizenship, expects proper training and support of your children, apparently offers little co-operation.

Ill-Transported, Too?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Imagine my horror upon reading in The Post of August 24 that many of those sturdy Americans who would come here to denounce the WPA layoffs are actually without automobiles! Nothing moved me quite so much as that simple remark of one of their leaders that more would have come were it not for the engine trouble and over-age of their conveyances. Surely, we must right this great injustice to the underprivileged.

It is sometimes claimed one-third of our people are ill-clad, ill-housed, and ill-nourished. How shocking is this additional evidence that many of them are also ill-transported. Of course, there are certain benighted creatures who, never having known the freedom of the open road, will be lacking in proper sympathy. But many others, like myself, who have owned a car and then been obliged to give it up, understand only too well how hard it is to have to part with our fur coats for ones of wool, and our rage against selfish taxpayers can be suppressed no longer.

"Rhett's Return?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is everything meant to go with the wind that swept through Georgia in Margaret Mitchell's now famous book? When I turned the last page and found blank pages, I felt as though it surely could not be the end of the story—the book, yes, but not the story. I am wondering because deep down inside of two such passionate beings as Scarlett and Rhett, Margaret Mitchell must find a sequel to her masterpiece, "Gone With the Wind."

All through the book they parted and were together again, so I am anxiously awaiting the sequel in "Rhett's Return," that I feel she is writing now.

Family Reunions.

OPEN season for family reunions is upon us again, but probably few Washingtonians will indulge this year in the old American custom, howbeit all of them are doubtless familiar with its potato salad and fried chicken tradition.

I don't propose to go into the history of the phenomenon, but merely to reach into the crusty recesses of memory and fish out a few anecdotes from my own personal experience, most of them delightfully nostalgic.

At the risk of seeming another Bob Burns, I'll tell first about my Cousin Lizzie, a 6-foot young Presbyterian female with long curls which seemed to have been shaven off a yellow pine plank in a planing mill—she of the silver cornet. Lizzie, thank heaven, I only met at family reunions. Her cornet solos haunt me to this day.

* * *

The family always arrived at the picnic grounds at Perry-on-the-Lake, in Ohio, long before noon, armed with frightful quantities of foodstuffs, indoor baseball bats and wearing a strange gleam in the eyes. The date was invariably the last week in August.

There was one uncle, whom I shan't mention by name except to say it was Jephtha, who invariably came armed with a small jug. This made him extremely unpopular with the womenfolk, especially Cousin Lizzie. But it did not detract from his popularity with the men, most of whom were farmers and in need of escape from summer-long worries about crops, beetles—and drought.

After feasting around a mammoth U-shaped outdoor table—seemingly hundreds of us—beneath the elms, with the blue waters of Lake Erie twinkling before us, Cousin Lizzie was wont to get out her silver cornet for a few hymns. Incidentally, Cousin Lizzie was enjoying the miseries of some kind of a mysterious diet the last time I saw her which required her to stand while she ate. Later I heard she went on an uncooked vegetable diet, sitting down.

* * *

Uncle Jephtha was always in high fettle by the time the picnic lunch was finished. He ate sparingly and conserved thereby the effects of his little jug, and was in no mood for evangelical diversion this particular day.

By some devilish ingenuity, Uncle Jephtha, a large porkish man with red jowls, managed to insert in Cousin Lizzie's silver cornet a portion of the contents of his little jug. He poured it in so it percolated into the coils of the trumpet, and she never suspected it was there as with fine spiritual fervor she lifted the instrument to her lips to render the charming strains of "Rock of Ages," her favorite. There was a gurgling bleat from the horn.

The liquid sprayed out over the solemn assemblage, dousing all the housewives within 15 feet with a very fragrant aroma. There were screams and quick, angry glances at Uncle Jephtha. Cousin Lizzie gulped, spat as though her mouth was full of kerosene, and promptly began to cry. Uncle Jephtha's wife jumped up and, eyes leaping fire, marched up to him and slapped his face resoundingly, which made him laugh. Mutiny broke out. Horror crossed the faces of the ladies, who in a hasty council of war voted to go home.

There was a great churning of automobile starters, wild packing of the food remnants, and half the womenfolk departed in what is usually described as a cloud of dust. Uncle Jephtha tried hard to laugh it off, but got little sympathy with his male cohorts, who were openly terrified of their wives' disfavor. Cousin Lizzie said she would have to have the cornet fumigated, as she tearfully packed it in its case.

* * *

That was about the most exciting thing that ever happened at the many reunions I attended in rural Ohio. It created a family topic of conversation which lasted well past Christmas, but by the following year Uncle Jephtha had been struck by a hit-skip driver and had two broken legs, which regained everyone's friendship.

There was the time my father bet $10 on the home town baseball team and scandalized everyone, probably because he lost. There was the time Cousin Florence appeared with a little man and announced she had eloped with him the night before, and there was the time I walked off the end of a pier trying to launch a rowboat, and almost drowned, much to my consternation.

But usually family reunions are pleasantly uneventful affairs, given over to the seemingly lost art of gorging and relaxing. Most of the participants stowed away beet pickles, country ham, fried chicken, potato salad, watermelon and cookies, and went to sleep, letting it go at that. All except Uncle Jephtha, who usually strolled down to the dance hall to study the village girls doing the Charleston.

Long Litigation.

IT SEEMS to President Roosevelt that a veritable conspiracy has existed on the part of many of the most gifted members of the legal profession to take advantage of the technicalities of the law and the conservatism of the courts to render measures of social and economic reform sterile or abortive.

But is Mr. Roosevelt just discovering this trait of the legal profession, and hasn't he known for many years of the lawyers' practice of dragging litigants through wearisome and expensive proceedings, of suppressing or shading testimony, of sending witnesses out of town or out of the country, of attacking indictments on trivial grounds, of using, in fact, every sly and evasive means of defeating the law which they are sworn to uphold?

Haven't counsel always placed the interests of their clients, however sinful, above those of the community, and for every swindle in securities by which the credulous were robbed of their savings in the gorgeous but goofy era of the great boom wasn't there a lawyer or a team of them to examine the law beforehand to determine just how the stealing could be performed without risk of punishment?

• • • •

NATURALLY, IF it serves the interests of their clients, gifted members of the legal profession will employ technicalities and impose on the conservatism of the courts to thwart measures of social or economic reform—or any other measures, for that matter. That is part of what they deem to be their solemn duty, and the legal mentality is such that any intentional failure to do so would be regarded as a breach of trust.

Delay in the courts? Why, delay is a recognized and highly respected weapon, and lawyers speak of it with no more sense of shame or guilt than a prize fighter feels in speaking of a jab. It gives time for the heat to cool off or the opposing side to lose interest or get so hard up for a settlement that a compromise may be had for much less than the just price under the evidence.

In a case of personal injury it either stalls off the trial until the victim dies, in which case his estate will present a much less convincing appearance to the jury, or until he recovers appreciably, in which case it will be hard to persuade the 12 good men, and true, that he really was hurt as badly as his doctors say he was.

• • • •

IN BIG LITIGATION involving public interest in utilities, delay may pad the fees of special counsel on the public pay roll at a rate to shame a crooner and, of course, the right of appeal has been confirmed as a right to obstruct and coerce; and let there be no naïve nonsense about that paragraph of the oath where the young lawyer says he will employ only those means which are consistent with truth and honor.

Out of his own long experience in the law and with lawyers, surely the President has advanced beyond that stage at which it "seems" that a conspiracy exists to take advantage of technicalities, for that is what technicalities are made for; and it may be said, too, that Government lawyers are no less alert to take advantage of them than counsel for private clients.

Lawyers write the laws, and many of those which they have written in the last few years are so complex and long-winded that the great social and political reforms of the New Deal may be said to benefit lawyers more directly than any other class.

• • • •

A MAN CAN'T plow a field, hire a hand or fire a cook but that he may be violating some law and should make sure. And if he talks to an old friend on his pay roll about his own idea of the C. I. O. he can be had up like any doormat and placed under glass for violating a law which he may have known nothing about.

It is hard to see how Mr. Roosevelt or anyone else can correct the nature of lawyers, but it does seem that the principal complaint is not against their nature but against the wrongheadedness of those who will not see as reforms all those measures which the New Deal desires.

If counsel were to resort to technicalities and take advantage of the radicalism of new, radical judges would the Administration still complain or would that be hokey-doke?

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Wallpaper Comes Back.

With big revivals in the bicycle, piano and trotting horse industries comes the further news that wallpaper has come back. Figures just announced show that the wallpaper business is close to a new high.

• • • •

There was a time when paperhanging was a booming industry. It ranked ahead of the harness, hairpin, bustle and hat-feather trades. There was at least one apprentice paperhanger somewhere in every family and the big task was to persuade him to leave his overalls in the cellar and not put 'em in the upstairs clothes closets.

• • • •

The paperhanger blew in with his stepladders, a couple of wooden buckets, some broad-gauge brushes that had the aroma of old eel-pots; he piled all the furniture in the middle of the room, unrolled some fierce looking rolls of wallpaper and began slapping it all over the premises.

• • • •

• • • •

• • • •

And those borders! The main wallpaper wouldn't have been so awful if it hadn't been for the borders. It has since been shown that many mysterious mental ailments of the mauve decade were due to wallpaper borders of the period.

• • • •

Finally there was a revolt or something. Wallpaper went into a decline and it became the fashion to paint and tint walls. Paperhangers disappeared from American life. But the wallpaper manufacturers took the hint and began producing paper that wouldn't frighten the children.

• • • •

With the blowsy patterns extinct, people began papering the rooms again. Last year the volume of the wallpaper business was the highest in years. The boom is attributed in part to the production of washable wallpaper.

• • • •

That was the trouble in the old days. You couldn't wash the paper or drown the paperhanger.

Excursion.

The children jump aboard the car,
And hope the road is wide and free;
The speedy motor spurns the miles
That lead them to the tumbling sea.
A few short fleeting years ago,
A breezy sail down to the shore,
Where romps about the crowded decks,
Made hearts leap up and spirits soar.
Then lunch became a godly feast,
With glistening breakers rolling near;
And milk drawn from the spotted cow
Would never, never know a peer.

• • • •

Now in the dusk they race along,
(I wonder would they like the sail?)
And carry popcorn home again,
And cling to shovel and to pail?

The Ethiopian Question Revives

Plan Reported To Expel Nation From League.

By C. Poznanski.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

IN CONNECTION with the so-called Italo-British "detente," so spectacularly initiated by the exchange of letters between Neville Chamberlain and Mussolini, the Ethiopian question comes again to the fore. Well-informed opinion affirms that Great Britain and France have already agreed upon a plan for the expulsion of Ethiopia from the League of Nations at the September Assembly of the League. Thus the way would be paved for the return of Italy to Geneva.

One may safely assume that this information is correct. It might therefore be interesting to consider without taking into account the merits and the justice of the case—the technical and juridical possibilities for the success of the Franco-British plan. For it is important to bear in mind that the essential character of the League of Nations consists in the fact that, though both the Council and the Assembly are primarily political bodies and purely political considerations are predominant with them, they are nevertheless bound by the text of the Covenant and by certain rules of procedure. And it may be awkward even for the great powers to attempt to break too flagrantly these texts and rules.

This same Ethiopian question may serve as proof that not everything can be done in the League Assembly, which at first sight might appear quite feasible.

French And British Were Agreed Year Ago.

A YEAR AGO Great Britain and France had decided to liquidate the Ethiopian question in the League. They had agreed on a plan—worked out probably by M. Pilotti, the Italian Assistant Secretary General of the League—which was accepted by Signor Mussolini in his conversations with the Secretary General of the League, M. Avenol. The plan was that the credentials committee of the Assembly should refuse to admit the Ethiopian delegation on the ground that Emperor Haile Selassie was no longer qualified to appoint delegates, as he no longer ruled in Ethiopia.

It will be remembered that the plan failed, that the Ethiopian delegation was admitted and that Count Ciano, who was fully prepared to come to the Assembly, had to unpack his bags and to remain in Rome. It is, nevertheless, interesting to recall why and how this plan failed.

The Italian press attributed the failure to the intervention of Soviet Russia, and Litvinov was made the villain of the piece. In actual fact, Soviet Russia played quite a subordinate role in the matter. The principal opposition came from the small European states (M. Limburg, the Dutch delegate and a prominent jurist leading this opposition), from two British dominions — South Africa and New Zealand—and last but not least from the president of the Assembly, Senor Saavedra Lamas.

And it is most important to note that the plan was abandoned without even having been actually proposed. When in the credentials committee, M. Jordan, the representative of New Zealand, candidly asked "Who questions the validity of the powers of the Ethiopian delegation?" nobody replied. And M. Jordan concluded, "Well, if nobody questions such validity, the question is settled."

It is also worth while to recall that after the admission of the Ethiopian delegation the British spokesmen were eager to affirm that Mr. Eden had never contemplated its exclusion.

Question Reappeared At Assembly Last June.

THE ETHIOPIAN QUESTION had to be disposed of a second time at the June Assembly of 1937 which was convened for the admission of Egypt to the League. This time Mussolini had declared in diplomatic conversations that he would no longer be content with the simple exclusion of the Ethiopian delegation. What he asked for was the exclusion of Ethiopia itself from the list of the member states.

Again, in well-informed quarters, it was suggested that the matter was settled by Great Britain and France. It was said that Sandler, of Sweden—one of the leaders of the opposition in 1936—had declared that it was of the utmost importance to bring Italy back to the League, that all European countries would agree to the exclusion of Ethiopia, and that M. van Zeeland would propose the exclusion.

What happened? When the Polish delegate, M. Komarnicki, made a cautiously worded declaration which might have been construed as a suggestion for the exclusion of Ethiopia, the declaration fell completely flat. M. Fabela, the Mexican delegate, violently opposed it, and the rest of the Assembly remained silent. And again the British spokesmen were eager to affirm that Mr. Eden had tried to prevent M. Komarnicki's intervention. It would appear, therefore, that there is sometimes many a slip between the preparation and the execution of carefully prepared plans.

Let us consider the outlook of the new plan.

First of all, it should be stated that the Assembly will not be asked to recognize the Italian conquest, still less to reverse its condemnation of the Italian aggression. Such a plan would be doomed from the start. Argentine, for one, could never accept the recognition of the conquest, as it would mean the abandonment of the Saavedra Lamas Treaty. And most of the countries which are more or less willing to accept a camouflaged acceptation of the fait accompli, would shrink before a direct acceptance of the results of aggression.

Plan Turns On Vote To Deny Statehood.

THE IDEA of Paris and London is simply to obtain the vote by the Assembly of a statement that Ethiopia is no longer an independent state and therefore can no longer be a member of the League of Nations.

It can be safely assumed that an immense majority of the states represented in the Assembly are in principle ready to accept that solution. But . . .

The 1936 plan brought the whole question into the sphere of procedure. The credentials committee was simply to decide that the powers of the Ethiopian delegation are insufficient. The new plan asks much more of the Assembly states. It asks that a decision be taken to exclude a member state. And the Covenant knows only one possibility for such an exclusion. It is contained in Article 16-4, which says:

Any Member of the League which has violated any covenant of the League may be declared to be no longer a Member of the League by a vote of the Council concurred in by the Representatives of all the other Members of the League represented thereon.

Obviously this article is inapplicable.

Of course, the Assembly, being sovereign, may take any decision even in cases not provided for by the Covenant itself. But here again there is a stumbling block in the rule of unanimity. This rule is absolute. Article 5 states:

Except when otherwise expressly provided in the Covenant or by the terms of the present Treaty, decisions at any meeting of the Assembly or the Council, shall require the agreement of all the Members of the League represented at the meeting.

And an unanimous vote is a practical impossibility. We may assume that many of the opponents in 1936, in the first instance the small European states, have changed their minds and that British influence may override the opposition of South Africa and New Zealand. We may even assume—though it is infinitely less probable—that diplomatic influences may persuade Soviet Russia and China to abstain from voting. It is nevertheless certain that there will be at least two uncompromising opponents: Mexico and Spain, the latter a member of the Council. And legally this opposition ought to be sufficient to annihilate the whole plan.

'Statement Of Fact' May Authorize Action.

A MEANS of neutralizing this opposition can be conceived. Possibly an attempt will be made to state that the Assembly has not to take a decision, but simply to register a fact, and that in these circumstances the unanimity rule is not applicable. Nevertheless, this rather lame explanation may also be defeated by asking the Assembly to decide whether this "registration" is not in the nature of a decision. And for this question, which prejudges the whole issue, unanimity would be required.

There exists a precedent. Many jurists and many states are of opinion that the appeal by the Council to the Permanent Court of International Justice is a question of procedure, and that the Council may decide it by a simple majority vote. Nevertheless the question whether the appeal is in fact a question of procedure could never be settled because that decision requires an unanimous vote.

It may be added that there are further considerations which, even before the Assembly meets, might dampen the newfound eagerness of the British government. The obvious reason for the British plan for excluding Ethiopia is the desire to bring Italy back to the League. And it is scarcely likely that the exclusion would be sufficient to obtain this objective.

First of all, although the terms of the Berchtesgaden agreement are unknown, there are signs that it implies a parallel attitude on the part of Italy and Germany towards the League. Thus it is not impossible that Italy would not come back so long as Germany refused to rejoin. Secondly, it should be borne in mind that Spain has a seat on the Council and even that M. Negrin will preside over the September session. How could a delegate of the Italian government, which has recognized Franco and for whom the Valencia government is only a gang of bolsheviks, sit down at a table under the chairmanship of a representative of the Spanish government?

These are the technical aspects of the British plan. It may succeed; Ethiopia may be expelled from the League of Nations. But it would be rash to take the success of the plan for granted.

China Blockade

By Barnet Nover

Japan's Large Order.

WITHOUT FORMALITY of any declaration of war Japan, or more precisely the vice admiral in command of the Japanese fleet in Chinese waters, recently ordered a blockade of the Chinese coast from a point north of Shanghai to a point below Swatow, a distance of about 800 miles.

In its original form this blockade order included all Chinese shipping, but specifically exempted shipping of other nations. But the ink was hardly dry on this document before an unnamed "spokesman for the third fleet" announced that the consideration shown foreign shipping would be strictly limited.

"We exercise," he said, "the privilege of preemption toward foreign bottoms carrying a cargo that in time of war would constitute contraband."

In other words, Japan may take it upon itself to search vessels flying neutral flags to make certain that they are not carrying contraband and if they are to take over such cargoes at an appraised price.

THE WORLD WAR made it clear how broad the term "contraband" has become. It has been extended to cover about everything that enters into international commerce. Thus, if Japan carries out its threat, the Japanese fleet will constitute itself the court of last resort as to what should and what should not be shipped into China by the outside world. And all this while Japan is technically though not actually at peace with its neighbor.

It is a large order. It would deal a severe blow not only to China, but also to Great Britain, France and the United States. Trade of each of these nations with China is not inconsiderable. During the first six months of this year we sold to China goods to the value of $31,355,000 and bought from her goods valued at $61,952,000, in both cases a very considerable increase over the corresponding period last year. And a blockade would pave the way for the supplanting of foreign exporters by Japanese exporters.

Ostensibly a war measure it also has strong commercial overtones. Even while mercilessly raining death and destruction on the Chinese, Japan continues to view China as an indispensable customer of its goods. Indeed it hopes by means of bomb and bayonet to make China an even better customer than it has been.

• • • •

POSSIBLY the ardor of the Japanese admirals will cool in the face of foreign refusal to submit to Tokyo's say-so as to what the outside world is to sell and what it is not to sell to China. Already France has made clear that it will under no circumstances recognize the validity of the contemplated blockade. And the other powers with large trade interests in China may take a similar stand.

These implied warnings Japan could hardly ignore. Indeed the very circumstance that the blockade zone specifically excludes the coast in the vicinity of Canton, Hongkong and Macao shows that Tokyo does not want to get any more embroiled in disputes with foreign powers than it can help.

Yet if the war in China continues, Japan with or without an actual declaration of war is likely to extend rather than limit the scope of its blockading efforts. And it may do so unless the foreign powers are prepared, by a show of force, to prevent her. The activities of the Japanese militarists have plunged the island empire into a situation in which it is easier, if more ruinous, to go ahead than to retreat.

• • • •

YET EVEN WERE the 800-mile zone blockade made watertight by the Japanese, this would not necessarily mean China's isolation from the outside world to the point where Chiang Kai-shek's armies would be deprived of arms, ammunition and implements of war.

There is the loophole of the land frontier between Chinese territory and Russian-dominated Outer Mongolia. There is also the railroad from French Indo-China to Yunnan which, during recent months, has at long last been connected by motor road with the Yangtze Valley.

But most important of all there is Hongkong, the great transshipment point for goods from Europe and America intended for South China.

Hongkong is British. Across the narrow channel separating it from the Asiatic mainland is the British-leased area of Kowloon. And at Kowloon there is a railroad which goes to Canton which in turn is connected by rail with the Yangtze Valley.

In view of this set of circumstances, therefore, a Japanese blockade of the Chinese coast could have only a limited value. It would condemn such secondary ports as Swatow, Amoy, Ningpo, etc., to impotence. But it would only lead to a rerouting of the trade channels between the China that is under Nanking's domination and the Western world. It could hardly lead to China's commercial isolation unless the great loophole of Hongkong were blocked up.

In imposing a blockade of Chinese ports Japan is setting out on a course full of dangers. But by now the Japanese warlords no doubt feel they have developed an immunity in handling dynamite. The German admiral who advised the Kaiser to undertake an unrestricted submarine campaign in 1917 could give them useful advice. But it is doubtful if they will listen to any counsels of prudence.

Educators, Clerics Win Point in Fight On Liquor License

School officials and churchmen won the first round of a fight against the licensing of a liquor shop at 4132 Georgia avenue yesterday, when the A. B. C. Board ordered a continuance until September 8.

Several members of Congress, including Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee, were said to be supporting Leo J. Rossiter, the applicant.

Among witnesses were H. K. Safford, principal of Macfarland Junior High School, and Charles E. Bish, assistant principal of Roosevelt High.

Safford said the store would be in the midst of a community of 6,000 day and night students. Bish said there had been complaints of drunkenness in the neighborhood.

5 Boys Trained Here Sent to Navy Station

Guggenheim Fellow

By William Lyon Phelps

Jesse Stuart.

Keep your eyes on Jesse Stuart, of Kentucky! He has just been awarded a Guggenheim Traveling Fellowship, the same blessing that enabled Stephen Vincent Benet to live two years in France and write "John Brown's Body."

Jesse Stuart is a farmer and a school teacher in Kentucky. Some years ago he published a copious collection of sonnets called "The Man With the Bull-tongue Plow." These poems were decidedly uneven in excellence, but they showed prodigious creative vitality, and they aroused my faith in him.

• • • •

This faith was strengthened by two things; first, by meeting and talking with him in Kentucky. He is absolutely sincere, wholly genuine, entirely earnest.

Second, by reading the short stories that he has been printing and which were recently collected under the title "Head o' W— Hollow," (published by E. P. Dutton & Co., New York). These are original in characterization, in the thought behind them, in the way they are told. The account of the fine old farmer, who, in the very prime of life, had an inner certainty that on this night he would die (so different from the rich farmer in the Gospels) and therefore called his family about him—well, that is a story that I shall remember as long as I live.

• • • •

All good wishes to Jesse Stuart in the coming year abroad! and look out for him when he comes home!

A Wise Action

"Do unto others as ye would have them do unto you" is one of the cardinal points of true religion, true citizenship and true friendship. It is the Golden Rule, and wherever and whenever used in daily life the world is made happier.

The Florida pardon board has carried out the Golden Rule in refusing to break into the past of a fugitive who has gained a place of prominence and confidence in a distant State since he jumped bond on robbery and grand larceny charges 14 years ago. Rising from a man charged with a felony to a judge on a court bench in 14 years, is a record of which any man should be proud; to have that record brought crashing down, as the Florida board has the power to do, not only would be heart-breaking to the man, his wife and two children, but probably would serve to destroy all faith the man has in his fellowman—if not his faith in God.

Veto Kills Plan To Name Roads After 4 States

President Adheres to Jefferson Policy, Suggests Other Steps.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission had the last laugh on Congress yesterday when President Roosevelt vetoed a resolution to name four short roadways in the Mall for Ohio, Missouri, Oklahoma and Maine.

The President, whose uncle, Frederic A. Delano, is chairman of the commission, in a memorandum suggested that Concord avenue and Riggs road be named Ohio avenue, that Benning road or Nichols avenue be named Oklahoma avenue, that Reno road be named for Maine, and that Linnean avenue be designated Missouri avenue.

As an alternative, the President said that Water street might be renamed Maine avenue and that Potomac avenue could be changed to Missouri avenue.

Thomas Jefferson named the diagonal avenues after the thirteen original States, Mr. Roosevelt said, and the rectangular streets were lettered and numbered. The District has since tried to follow this system of street designation.

Oklahoma, Maine and Missouri have small streets named for them now in Washington, but members of Congress from these States contend that the designations do their homes no honor. Ohio avenue was wiped out in the Federal Triangle.

Roosevelt Studies East, Signs Bill at Hyde Park Home

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 27.—President Roosevelt arrived for a prolonged stay at the summer White House today.

He remained indoors all day receiving reports on the Far Eastern warfare and working on a batch of leftover Congressional bills.

He signed the $54,000,000 rivers and harbors bill, and officials said he was expected soon to approve the related $34,000,000 flood-control measure.

Word that Robert W. Bingham, American Ambassador to London, had arrived from abroad prompted speculation he would call on the President here after a visit to Washington, but White House officials said no engagement had yet been made.

Among the most important measures brought here for further study was the sugar quota bill, which would replace the Jones-Costigan act, expiring December 31, 1937.

Veterans Will Get Reclaimed Lands

Over 5,000 acres of irrigable land in the Tule Lake division in northern California will be available to war veterans with homestead rights beginning October 25, Commissioner of Reclamation John C. Page announced yesterday. The 69 units will be open to the public when the veterans' preference expires January 25, 1938. The land is part of the Klamath Federal reclamation project.

Prospective settlers are required to have a capital of $2,000 or its equivalent in farm machinery or livestock.

Application blanks may be obtained from and filed with Supt. B. E. Hayden, of the Klamath project, Bureau of Reclamation, Klamath Falls, Oreg.

Flannagan Strong For Special Session

By the Associated Press.

Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., of Bristol, Va., ardent New Dealer, urged yesterday a special session of Congress to pass farm and labor legislation.

"If it takes a discharge petition to bring these pieces of legislation before the House in the extra session in order to get around the Rules Committee, I will be among the first to sign the petition"

Hungarian Regent Seeks Nazi Peace

Vienna, Aug. 27 (AP).—Regent Horthy of Hungary, in the role of special peace-maker, began an "unofficial vacation" today in Austria.

Most of his efforts, diplomats believed, would be bent toward harmonizing Austrian and German relations, strained over the German church situation and Nazi activities in Austria.

$100,000 Is Sought For Georgetown's Remaining Hotel

At one time it was one of the finest seafood restaurants in town. The city's first summer beer garden was there, and there at one time lived some members of Washington's first baseball team.

Joseph Schladt, the owner, died last June. In his will he stipulated that the hotel was not to be sold for less than $100,000. Efforts for a comeback were unsuccessful, and now the real estate dealers are hoping to find a historical society seeking a home.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By S. M. Barrett,
Batting for Scott Hart.

Supported.

The all-embracing Agriculture Department Recreational Association is a vital and potential agency in the furtherance of social activities of employes. Every known activity from archery to baseball and philatelics to symphonics has its individual club within the association.

BARRETT.

It has grown in less than three years to become the guiding hand in bringing out latent attributes and dormant possibilities of expression among employes. It is distinctly a worthwhile association.

Their theatrical productions and their musical clubs approach professional caliber. Nearby towns in Virginia and Maryland have requested appearances.

Seeking the answer to this unprecedented success, this column journeyed recently to the source—the office of the weekly bulletin, the Agriculture Exchange. There we met Milton M. Spahn and Irene L. Bartlett, staff members. Editor Joseph D. Cooper was on vacation. We asked for a copy of the first issue. It was dated April 1, 1935. The following, which points the answer, is what we read on the cover:

"To the Employes of the Department of Agriculture:

"I am glad to welcome this publication of the Department of Agriculture employes. It has been a constant source of regret to me that the burden of work since I took office has prevented me from taking a more definite part in the various activities engaged in by employes of the department.

"I hope this little publication may serve as a vehicle to promote wholesome functions of various kinds to the end that the department will become a better place in which to work, with more general acquaintance and deepened friendliness. Sincerely,

"H. A. WALLACE."

Thus encouraged at the outset, their efforts have been doubly successful. The bulletin is distributed gratis to each employe. Every activity, even the unions, is given space in its columns.

Appointees.

Recent appointees: Rena Pearl Hamilton, Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, from Morehead City, N. C., winsome graduate of Meredith College, Raleigh, N. C. . . . Walter J. Raleigh, drafting section, Reclamation, comes from Mankato, Minn., brings his bride with him and is looking for a bungalow.

Mrs. Sarah Grigg, Reclamation, with the distinction of 33 years Federal service, is confined at home with illness.

Department of Commerce: Helen Ganey (Bureau of Fisheries) and sister, Honora Ganey, Veterans' Bureau, return from home visit in Minnesota September 1.

G. P. O.: Marie Nohe (office superintendent of documents) made trip via boat from Baltimore to Boston to attend convention of Notre Dame Alumnae.

Indian Bureau: Thomas H. Hampton, baseball captain, expects to enter G. W. Tommy is a musician, plays the clarinet and saxophone.

Rural Mail.

C. C. McDevitt, former Washington newspaperman, publisher of the National Rural Letter Carrier, official weekly organ of that association, is the only man in the association who is not a carrier. Mac probably knows more rural carriers than anyone else. His office here is the stopping place of every carrier visiting the Capital. His correspondence is voluminous. Invitations pour into their office continuously for both to attend county and State conventions throughout the country. If one happens to come across a rural mail carrier in the backwoods somewhere and wants to establish cordial relations, just ask about "Mac and Martha."

Unquestionably, postal unions are the strongest of any Federal employe associations. The manner of their organization, their coherence, their objectives, and above all else, in service to members they stand pre-eminent.

The National Rural Letter Carriers Association is among the top flight of Federal employe organizations. The reason is understandable. Every officer of the N. R. L. C. is an active working mail carrier with a definite route.

Battalion Holds County as One Of Island Group

Fifth Marine Reservists Please Observers in Maneuvers.

The Fifth Batallion, Fleet Marine Corps Reserve, in a full battalion-in-attack maneuver, acted as the advance guard and covering force for the main body of the Fleet Marine force which had landed on the coast of Prince William Island at Fredericksburg to march to Quantico, there to destroy enemy naval stores and industrial facilities.

An enemy battalion blocked the approach to Quantico on a ridge of hills west of Quantico. The Fifth Battalion after 5 o'clock reveille, moved out to the combat area and jumped off at 7:30 with four companies in attack and two in reserve.

The maneuver concluded at 11:30 a. m., the enemy having been enveloped and driven to the east.

Battalion Praised.

The board of observers, consisting of Majs. Eugene F. C. Collier, Jesse L. Perkins and J. D. Waller, moved through with the battalion. Maj. Collier expressed the board's approval of the maneuver's execution.

"What few mistakes there were were minor ones," Maj. Collier said.

The battalion spent the afternoon polishing up for tomorrow's parade in honor of Col. William P. Upshur, U. S. M. C. director of the Marine Corps Reserve.

The officers of the battalion fired pistols for record today. High score was 90 out of a possible 100 by First Lieut. Henderson A. Melville, of Company D. First Lieut. Leon Brusiloff, the battalion's bandmaster, was second with 89, and Capt. Charles B. Nerren, of Company G. was third with 88.

The Haitian brevet of merit with diploma awarded by the president of Haiti and authorized by act of Congress will be presented at tomorrow's parade to First Sergt. Fred Bellon, U. S. M. C., assistant to the inspector instructor, Fifth Battalion. Tomorrow forenoon the battalion will also stage its final parade in honor of Maj. Lewis B. Reagen, U. S. M. C., the battalions' inspector instructor.

To Award Cup.

Company D, First Lieut. Othol Rogers, today won the Col. Frank P. Edmonds general efficiency cup, the highest award within the battalion. The cup will be presented to Company D by Col. Upshur at tomorrow's parade and the winning company will also receive the 1937 efficiency guidon streamer to be attached to its guidon by the battalion commander, Maj. Harvey L. Miller.

The winning company piled up 63 points to win the cup. In second place was Company C, First Lieut. Justice M. Chambers, with 59 points. In third place was Company A, Capt. John W. Augustine, 47 points.

Other awards to be made at tomorrow's parade, all of which counted as points toward the Edmonds Cup are, The Old Rifle, for clean rifles, Company C. Klemfuss Cup for high average rifle scores, Company B. Norfolk Chamber of Commerce Cup for close order drill, Company D. N. C. O. Cup for best guard mount, Company D. Fred W. Buchholz Cup for clean company streets, Company D. Elizabeth Edmonds Harris Cup for the best close order squad, Company C. Veterans of Foreign Wars Medal for the best drilled private, James W. Lannigan, jr., Company C. Dwight L. Harris Cup for outstanding enlisted man, Sergt. Maj. Harry F. Volkman, Headquarters Company.

Other Awards.

Also the Daughters of 1812 Medal for best drilled marine, Sergt. Ted P. Dorsey, Company A. Ruth Brewster D. A. R. Medal for progress in military education, Sergt. Ted P. Dorsey, Company A. American Legion best corporal medal for extended order, Corpl. Raymond A. Powers, Company C. Marine Corps ring to best guidon bearer, Private Richard C. Warren, Company D. Chesterfied Cup for privates highest rifle score, Private John Apergis, Company D. The Capt. William W. Stickney trophy for athletic excellence, Company C. The Warburton Cup for high officers rifle score, Capt. Chas. B. Nerren, Company G. The Efficiency Medal for best administrative paper work, Corpl. Charles I. Britts, Company G.

'Aunt Susan' Prepares Chicken for 2,000 Guests of Senator Byrd

More than 2,000 apple growers from all sections of the country are celebrating the 1937 apple harvest as guests of Senator Harry F. Byrd, at his Rosemont orchards near Winchester, Va. Susan Tokes (above), popular cook from the hills of Virginia, was engaged by the Senator for the occasion to prepare hundreds of chickens and choice Virginia hams for the box luncheons. At left, her nephew, William Pope lends a helping hand.

T. C. Simpson's Funeral Is Set For Today Here

Veteran Printer Read National Geographic Proofs for 47 Years.

Funeral services for Thomas C. Simpson, 82, proofreader for the National Geographic Magazine for 47 years, who died Thursday, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Lee's funeral home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast.

Mr. Simpson, whose home was at 624 D street northeast, was born on a farm near Hampton Roads. He was driven with his mother from their home in the Civil War, in which his father served with the Confederate Cavalry.

He was a member of the Typographical Union.

He left his wife, Celestina Petrola Simpson; a son, Walter Simpson, and two daughters, Mrs. Mabel S. Hutchinson and Mrs. Edith S. Hutchinson, and four grandchildren.

Miss Cristofoli Dies at 32 in Pa.

Miss Zelinda T. Cristofoli, 32, of 3200 Twelfth street northeast, died yesterday at Hamburg, Pa., after illness of several years.

Born in Scotland, Miss Cristofoli had lived in Washington since childhood. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Domenica Bertini, and two sisters, Mrs. Ines Casagranda, and Miss Doris Bertini, all of Washington.

Requiem mass will be held at St. Anthony's Catholic Church at 9 a. m. Monday, following brief services at 8:30 o'clock at Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Charles Thoenen Dies at Hospital

Charles J. Thoenen, 79, father of John Thoenen, engineer with the Bureau of Mines, died Thursday at Sibley Hospital. He had been ill two months.

Mr. Thoenen, whose home was at Barbeau, Mich., had been staying at his son's home, 4105 Wisconsin avenue northwest, for the last year. He was a retired merchant, a thirty-second degree Mason, and past commander of the Knights Templar Lodge of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Technique.

Ambitious bidding can often be compensated for by means of perfect technique in the play of the cards. Both North and South stretched their hands to the breaking point in the deal below and got to a highly speculative game contract. Perhaps their reason was that each felt the greatest confidence in the other's ability to extract the maximum number of tricks from the combined hands. This confidence was justified, to the disgust of poor West, whose penalty double was of the sourdest.

Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ K 8 5 4 2 ♡ 7 6 ◇ J 9 4 ♣ A 10 9
♠ A J 10 ♡ K J 10 9 3 ◇ K 8 ♣ Q J 3	West / North / East / South	♠ 9 6 3 ♡ 8 4 2 ◇ 7 5 3 ♣ 6 5 4 2
	♠ Q 7 ♡ A Q 5 ◇ A Q 10 6 2 ♣ K 8 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♡	1 ♠	Pass
1 N T	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Dbl.	Pass	Pass

West opened the Jack of hearts and South won with the Queen. A count of tricks revealed the fact that four winners were available immediately in top hearts and clubs. Four more were available in the diamond suit, even if the finesse should lose. But South was pretty sure that the finesse was doomed, because of West's double. It was highly unlikely that West would double a three notrump contract so confidently bid unless he was sure of one trick in South's long suit.

To go after the diamonds at once, therefore, would be to lose the contract. West would win with his King, knock out the Ace of hearts, and South would never make a spade trick. West would wait his opportunity to take the first spade and run the rest of his hearts.

At trick 2, therefore, South led a low spade and West was helpless. If he ducked, North would win with the King and declarer would promptly abandon the suit. Having stolen his ninth trick, he would go right after the diamonds for the success of his contract. Going up with the Ace of spades would do West no good at all. A heart return would knock out South's Ace, but then South would cash the Queen of spades and go over to dummy by means of the Ace of clubs and run the rest of the spades. Thus, South would make four spade tricks, two hearts, two clubs and one diamond.

Engineer Dies, Gun in Hand, At Tidal Basin

Widow Reveals Former U. S. Aide Had Worried Over Ill Health.

George W. Baxter, 67, retired Postoffice engineer, was found fatally shot last night near the Tidal Basin boathouse.

His body, seated on a bench and facing across the basin to the Washington Monument, was found about 8:30 o'clock by Arthur Isler, 1706 F street northwest. In his right temple was a bullet hole, and his fingers still held the death weapon, a small .32 caliber revolver.

Dr. E. G. Gordon of Emergency Hospital, pronounced the man dead shortly after 9 p. m. He was believed to have been dead about an hour. No one reported having heard the shot. Persons who were in the vicinity around 8 have suggested that a motorcycle which passed at that time might have drowned out the sound of a shot.

Baxter's widow, Mrs. Rhoda Baxter, told police he had left their home, 1027 Hamlin street northeast, about 3 p. m. yesterday. She said he had been despondent over ill health for some time.

Baxter, a native of Frederick, Md., retired about five years ago after 35 years service in the Postoffice Department. Besides his widow, he leaves two sons, Frank and LeRoy Baxter, of Washington.

Legion Auxiliary Post Installs New Officers at Convention

Mrs. Mary B. McMillin Heads Sergeant Jasper Unit No. 13; Mrs. Harper Is Chosen for Department Chief.

Officers of Sergeant Jasper Unit No. 13 were installed at the recent American Legion Auxiliary Department Convention held at the Red Cross Chapter House. The officers are, president, Mrs. Mary B. McMillin; vice presidents, Mrs. Virginia McCarthy and Mrs. Helen Ware; sergeant at arms, Mrs. A. Helen Horton; chaplain, Mrs. Della Knock; historian, Mrs. Henrietta McKay; colorbearers, Mrs. Loretta Smith and Mrs. Marion Money.

Mrs. Dorthy B. Harper, retiring president of the unit, was elected department president, defeating Miss Lillian Reagan by a vote of 87 to 42. Representation from the unit to the national convention to be held in New York September 20-23 will be Mrs. Harper, delegate; Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren, alternate, and Mrs. Helen Ware, page.

A surprise party was given in honor of Mrs. Harper at her apartment in the Miramar on Thursday evening by the unit executive committee. A Cogswell chair was presented her. A majority of the trophies awarded for meritorious service in membership were received by the Jasper Unit. A national citation was presented for having a 100 per cent paid membership enrolled on December 31, and exceeding that of the previous year. The Killeen cash award was presented also for being the first unit in the District of Columbia department to reach a 100 per cent enrollment. The Dorothy B. Harper 8 et 40 senior trophy was won for having the largest percentage of gain over that of last year on June 30. Mrs. Mary K. Killeen's senior silver trophy was awarded for having the largest number of new members at the close of August 1. The Mary B. Corwin trophy for outstanding unit activities was also won. The report that won the trophy with a rating of 100 per cent on points has been sent to the national Eastern vice president to be judged for a national citation.

The Adeline Halloran trophy for junior activities was won for the second time by the junior group. The Mary B. McMillin history trophy was also won by the junior group. The gold pin offered by Miss Edna M. McIntosh, department membership chairman, was won by Claire McCarthy, a junior member, for securing the largest number of juniors in the department.

Mary Winifred McCarthy, Mary Catherine Ware, Gladys Bell, Eileen Dwyer and Lois Viancour will accompany the District of Columbia Sons of the Legion Drum and Bugle Corps when they march up Fifth avenue in the American Legion parade on September 22. Mary Winifred McCarthy will serve as leader, and the color bearers and color guards will be composed of the other four juniors.

The Junior Glee Club gave a musical program at the American Legion Department Convention held at the Mayflower Hotel and also participated in the auxiliary convention when Mrs. O. W. Hahn, national president, reviewed the Sons of the Legion and the Juniors of the Auxiliary.

Soroptimists' Meeting Is Set

Club Will Contribute to Sesquicentennial of Constitution.

The Soroptimist Club of Washington will contribute to the Constitution Sesquicentennial celebration at a mass meeting to be held at the Willard Hotel September 15. Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, in charge of the program, has asked clubs in the South Atlantic region to participate. Many of the sections of the country in which history of the Constitution was made, will be represented. The list of speakers has not been announced, but Mrs. Gasch is arranging for a number especially versed in the history of the Constitution.

The Soroptimist Club of Washington will hold its first get together luncheon at the Willard Hotel Wednesday after a recess of two months. Greeting will be given by the president, Miss Daisy Reed; vice president, Mrs. Agnes Newman; recording secretary, Mrs. Charlotte La Fond; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Paula Everhardt; treasurer, Mrs. Constance Jones.

Snodgrass, recording secretary; Mrs. Fred P. Trott, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Edgar T. Brown, treasurer and hostess.

The next meeting of the board will be held at the clinic on September 13. The card party next Tuesday will be given under the auspices of the ways and means committee, Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass, chairman. The public is invited.

Newspaper Club Head Plans Voyage to West

Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, Capital correspondent for the Minneapolis Journal and president of the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington, left last night for New York. Tomorrow she will sail on the Santa Rosa for California by way of the Panama Canal.

Stopping for visits in Los Angeles and San Francisco, Mrs. Harris will then start back to Washington by train, spending some time at Lake Tahoe, and in Minneapolis and Denver.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 27.

IF YOU THINK we're kidding about this World's Fair we propose to run in the year 1939, if the world manages to stick it out that long, you just bustle right over here and have a look at the old Flushing Meadows; the once dismal and deserted area where we propose to set up our hamburger salons!

ALICE HUGHES.

Already the administration building, which set us back $900,000, is open for business. It was built in 124 working days, and houses 600 boys and girls all striving away for dear life and the weekly pittance. Grand Poobah Grover Whalen, however, still keeps his office in Uncle Al Smith's Empire State Building, which is handier to things. Grover opened the administration building and unveiled a big bas-relief on it the other day, and then sailed away for Europe to peddle his expo to those foreign bosses who haven't yet spoken for space. Of course, no hot-dog emporia are yet in operation, but there's a big cafeteria in the new building, so I guess you can get a snack.

We've had spies in Cleveland, Dallas and Fort Worth checking up on how to run fairs, and how not to run fairs, and will know a few tricks by the summer of 1939 for use out Flushing way, which is not far over East River.

Some of our folks are beginning to fret about the entertainment, for fear this wicked city will go in for undraped ladies, with or without fans, and other such sucker traps. A Mrs. Eloise Griffith, who does social work here, is extracting promises that all the shows will be decent, and I am now waiting for a workable definition of fair-decency. All these didoes are in progress with only one building up and the super-colossal event still two years away. But it's never too early to guard our civic morals, be they ever so humble!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Not long ago I told about the movie-house purse grabber known to the trade as a "seat-tipper," who tips ladies' handbags off seats and slithers away. He's a playful child compared with the vicious brutes who went to work here the other day. They might have killed people. This bandit gang has one member faint, another yell "Fire," and in the ensuing scramble all hands snatch purses in a crowded movie house. Ever hear of anything more horrible? The loot was a dozen handbags, and the police were too late to nab the villains . . .

It's time for Tallulah Bankhead to get started on rehearsals for "Antony and Cleopatra," but the dashing Talloo can't bear to come to this stewing place for them. And, if I know anything about actors, they can be lured fairly easily . . .

It is now time for the usual back-to-the-mines present for the college girl, and a truly elegant gift is a good portable typewriter. Why, she might, Heaven help her, even turn out to be a writer, which some consider the real Fate Worse Than Death . . .

In spite of the zipper epidemic of the past year or two, buttons are playing a very important role in the fall duds. In fact, they are now forming part of the design of good ensembles. In keeping with the luxury trend, some of them are jeweled. They're found on lapels and even necklines. In other words, the dear old button is no longer merely a fastener, but actually has lines to speak in the 1937 fashion show.

Dr. Eloise B. Cram, of Health Service, Invited to Address Zonta Club Sept. 8

Expert Has Spent Six Months Studying Parasitology Here.

Pinworm, Trichinosis Increasing in D. C., Survey Shows.

ONE OF THE MOST interesting speakers to appear before the Zonta Club this fall will be Dr. Eloise B. Cram, of the Public Health Service, who is scheduled to make an address at the September 8 meeting of the club.

For the past six months Dr. Cram has been one of a group of research workers detailed by the Public Health Service to make a study of parasitology. It has been discovered that the District of Columbia and regions near the District have in recent years been threatened with increasing cases of pinworm infestation and with trichinosis. Dr. Cram, who is in entire charge of the study of pinworm infestation, says that previous to this time very little attention has been given to this disease, but that its growth, particularly in this section, necessitates an extensive research.

She, herself, has been very busy, not only in the lab, but also in various clinics where she has been conducting examinations of the victims of the malady. In addition to this, investigators are making a "census" report on the exact number of the population infected. Preventive measures are being worked out in their application to various phases of the same disease.

When the Government early this year appropriated a special fund to the research department of the Public Health Service, Dr. Cram and others saw an opportunity to make a thoroughgoing study of the evil.

Dr. Cram, who received her undergraduate training at the University of Chicago, also took graduate work here in Washington at the George Washington University's medical school.

Previous to her association with the Public Health Service, she was connected for several years with the Department of Agriculture.

Bachrach.

DR. ELOISE B. CRAM,
who is conducting research in parasitology, will address the Zonta Club at its meeting on September 15.

The Sunday Post, Alone, Offers These Features—

Tobacco and its importance to the Nation, scrap iron for munitions manufacture, the story of Ashlawn, the National Air Races, a special article on American University and an insight into the Van Gogh exhibition at the Paris Exposition are included in a distinguished list of features found only in The Sunday Post. Others follow:

Fiction, Opinion The Sunday Post's short-short story is Calleso Murders," a mystery thriller by Raoul Whitfield. The American Institute of Public Opinion, in its latest poll, reports a Nation-wide Democratic popularity poll and American sentiment on a constitutional amendment prohibiting a third term for Presidents.

War News Eyes of the world are on strife-torn China. And the eyes of Washington are on The Post for outstanding coverage of the hostilities. Why? Because The Post, alone, each morning brings the combination of these three distinguished war coverage services—Wirephoto, Associated Press and the behind-the-scenes articles by Mark J Ginsbourg, The Post's own correspondent in Shanghai.

Comics, Roto Washington's all-star comic section featuring, in colors, such popular favorites as Joe Palooka, Apple Mary, Mickey Finn, Big Chief Wahoo and those side-splitting cartoons, "Off the Record" and "Grin and Bear It," appears in The Sunday Post. Sunday's rotogravure section tells the picture-story of such interesting events as the horse show, at Berryville, Va.; scenes along the famous Skyline Drive, the State conservation farm at Gaithersburg, Md., and life with the District Guardsmen at Camp Albert C. Park Service Hires General Who Led 1,000,000 Russians

Levandowsky Transferred From D. C. Commission to New Mexico.

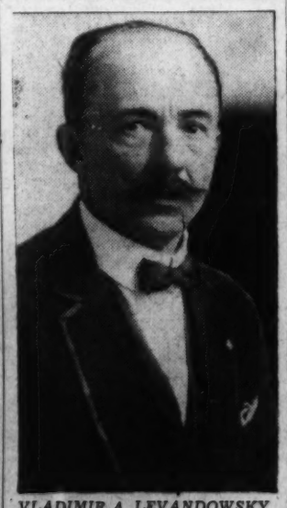
After six years with the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, Vladimir A. Levandowsky, former Russian general, has been transferred to the National Park Service and sent to Santa Fe, N. Mex.

At one time the 64-year-old Russian was commander in chief of the Czar's army in the Caucasus, and during the Russo-Japanese War he was said to have commanded 1,000,000 men.

His hobby was gardening, which he followed on his vast Russian estates near Tiflis and which enabled him to take a civil service job with the parks division as a landscape gardener. At his home in East Falls Church, Va., he continued to make his work his hobby.

Since coming to the United States, Gen. Levandowsky's health has been poor and it is believed the transfer to New Mexico will benefit it.

During the Russian revolution the general was captured by the Bolsheviks and placed on trial for his life. One of the charges against him was that he had "implements of war" in a collection of medieval armor.



VLADIMIR A. LEVANDOWSKY.

Woodrings On Weekend Virginia Trip

Dr. and Mrs. Perry Martinson Join Them on Excursion.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

While most Washingtonians who haven't yet gone vacationing are joining the week-end exodus to mountain and beach resorts with the hope of being away until after Labor Day, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring have planned to divide their end-of-summer vacation between trips to Williamsburg, Va., and Pulaski, N. Y.

Yesterday afternoon, accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Perry Martinson, they left by motor for Williamsburg, where they will spend today and part of tomorrow sightseeing in that historic Capital. They expect to make a tour of the buildings that have recaptured the glory of the Colonial era, wander leisurely up and down wide Duke of Gloucester street, glimpse rambling old Southern mansions through quaint picket fences, and visit some of the old-fashioned gardens that have helped to make the town famous.

The three Woodring children are staying in Washington over the week-end, as is the Secretary's niece, Mrs. Claire Casey, of Topeka, Kans., who has been visiting here for some time. Mr. and Mrs. Woodring and Dr. and Mrs Martinson expect to return late tomorrow afternoon.

* * * *

Plan New York Trip For Next Week-End

On Friday, September 3, the Woodrings will go to Pulaski, N. Y., to spend several days. According to present plans, they will return to Washington on Tuesday, September 7, and will be here most of the time from then on through the winter.

* * * *

The Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, hasn't had a real vacation all summer. Her comings and goings have been limited to short business trips permitting even less rest than she gets here in Washington. Last night, however, she left for New York and will go from there on up-State to spend several days with her daughter and husband. She expects to be gone until after Labor Day.

* * * *

Hulls Have No Vacation Plans

After spending the summer in the Capital, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull haven't made any plans for a vacation now or later. So far as they know now, they will stay on at their apartment at the Carlton Hotel right through Labor Day, autumn and winter.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper also will probably be here through Labor Day. Mrs. Roper returned yesterday morning from Gibson, N. C., where she was the guest of her brother, William McKensie, since Sunday. She and the Secretary have no definite vacation plans thus far. Their daughter, Mrs. Frank Bohn, and the latter's husband, Dr. Bohn, who have spent the summer in California while he has been teaching in the university there, will come to Washington the second week in September for a visit.

Miss Parker's Wedding Is Set

THE WEDDING of Miss Marion Parker, of Washington, and William C. H. Needham, of Baltimore, Md., will take place, Wednesday, September 1, in All Souls Unitarian Church. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Maurice S. White, pastor of the Congregational Church.

Miss Parker is the daughter of L. H. Parker, Chief of Staff of the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, and Mrs. Parker. A number of Senators, Representatives and Federal officials will attend.

Mrs. Armistead W. Gilliam, sister of the bride, will serve as matron of honor, and Miss Emma Jean Parker, another sister, as maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Gertrude V. Chestnut, of Hyattsville, Md., and Mrs. Raymond J. Goodhart, of Colonial Village, Va.

Mason Chandler Brunson, of Baltimore and Florence, S. C., will be best man. The ushers will be Ralph I. Williams, Armistead W. Gilliam, and J. Marshall Mathias, all of Washington.

A reception will be held at the home of the bride immediately after the ceremony. The couple will go to New England on a wedding trip.

Leaving Soon to Live in South America

Underwood & Underwood.

Stangs on Tour Through Canada

Newly Married Couple Will Make Home Here September 20.

NOW ON AN EXTENDED motor trip through Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Preston J. Stang, who were married August 21, will return to Washington to make their home after September 20.

Mrs. Stang was the former Miss Helen S. Wertman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wertman, sr. Mr. Stang is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Stang. The ceremony took place at the Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, with the Rev. Samuel T. Nicholas, pastor of the church, officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, chose a dress of white chantilly lace, fashioned on princess lines, and close-fitting jacket with long sleeves. Her hat was of white horsehair braid, turned off the face and trimmed with velvet ribbon. Her only ornament was a string of matched pearls. Her flowers were bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Marion Wertman served as maid of honor for her sister and wore a gown of turquoise blue lace with short puff sleeves. Her large leghorn hat was trimmed with long streamers of pink velvet. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Her bridesmaids were Mrs. Sam Mears and Mrs. Boyd Willard.

Richard Stang, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. The ushers were William Henry Wertman, jr., and William J. DeJarnette.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Wertman, jr., in Chevy Chase.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. James Moyer and the Misses Mabel and Mary Moyer, of Reading, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. James V. Shaff and the Misses Hilda and Julia Shaff, of Frederick, Md.; Mrs. C. M. Droneburg and Miss Mary Belle Droneburg, of Jefferson, Md.; Mrs. E. May Zimmerman, Mr. and Mrs. Haldan Zimmerman, and the Misses Ruth and Anna Belle Zimmerman, of Frederick, Md.; and Charles Stockman and the Misses Margaret, Pearl and Ruth Stockman, of Jefferson, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Beall On Niagara Tour

Now on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, and Ocean City, N. J., Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Edwin Beall were married August 21 in Gorsuch Methodist Episcopal Church, with the Rev. W. Smith Chism officiating.

Before her marriage, the bride was Miss Edith Donaldson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Burton Donaldson. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Beall.

The bride wore a white silk redingote over white satin, and a long white net veil, trimmed in lace to match her gown. Her headpiece was of seed pearls.

Her matron of honor was Mrs. Helena Donaldson Gardiner, her sister, and her bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Beall, the bridegroom's sister, and also Miss Ruth Volland. Miss Barbara Ann Donaldson, niece of the bride, was her flower girl.

George Beall, jr. served as best man, while the ushers were Edgar Heflin and Allen Davis.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

WASHINGTONIANS WITH A taste for "unstudied informality" are making plans to go to Capon Springs over Labor Day week-end.

Daniel Webster no doubt would twitch in his grave if he could see the changes that have taken place in this little-known West Virginia resort since he dedicated the bathing pavilion there years ago. In his day it was a very fashionable spa, where dignified ladies and gentlemen went to partake of the healing waters of the springs. One of the most famous resorts in the South, it was an American Deauville and Carlsbad rolled into one.

At the turn of the century, however, hard times came to Capon Springs. The big hotel burned down, and the railroad was abandoned. Nobody went near the place until about two years ago, when a group of Washington residents "discovered" it. Among those who now go there often are Mannix Walker, Tony de Balasy of the Hungarian legation, Frederick Nichols, Dorothy Cassard, Mrs. Patterson Roberts, and the Burnett Turners. Some of them are returning for the labor holiday.

They say life at the Springs is delightfully simple, and yet there is plenty to do and plenty to eat. They have a weighing scale outside the dining room, and people have been known to gain 2 pounds at a sitting of Southern fried chicken and gravy.

There is one main house, and cottages are sprinkled around it. Diversions include swimming, golf, tennis, archery, deck tennis and mountain climbing. Then there is boating on a lake about 2 miles from the Springs.

* * * *

ADD VACATIONISTS: Eleanor Flood and her mother, Mrs. Harry Flood, have left their Shoreham apartment for a visit to Canada. They will return in about ten days . . . Dr. Ernest Greuning, director of the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, has begun the trip West to sail from California on the Congressional tour to Hawaii. He and Mrs. Greuning left by motor several days ago for the Coast. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Deschler are also leaving shortly, on the same mission.

* * * *

G. HOWLAND SHAW, of Boston, has arrived in Washington and has taken an apartment at the Anchorage. Formerly Counselor of the Embassy at Istanbul, Turkey, he has been assigned to the State Department as Chief of the Division of Foreign Service Personnel. He was with the department here from 1926 to 1929.

Herbert Hengstler, whom he succeeds, is going to Toronto today as Consul General.

William Reids 'At Home' Here

Couple Wed in Georgetown July 31 Return From Honeymoon.

MR. AND MRS. HOWARD WILLIAM REID, who returned recently from their wedding trip to Bedford Springs, Pa., and who are now living at 3035 Q street were married July 31. Mrs. Reid was the former Miss Mary Hamilton Brinkley, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Milo H. Brinkley. Mr Reid is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Reid, of Meriden, Conn.

The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's parents in Georgetown with the Rev. W. D. Keene officiating. Only relatives of the bride and bridegroom attended. Members of the family who came from out of town were Mrs. W. H. Oliver, aunt of the bride, and H. M. Conger, uncle of the bride, both of Seattle, Wash.

Mrs. Reid is a graduate of George Washington University and studied art for a year at the Sorbonne. Mr. Reid is a graduate of Tufts College, Mass.

Fields on Trip To Nova Scotia

Now on a wedding trip to Nova Scotia, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Fields, who will make their home here in Washington on their return, were married August 22 at Congregation Talmud Torah, with Rabbi Joshua Klavan officiating. Mrs. Fields is the former Yetta Estelle Morgenstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Louis Morgenstein, of this city. Mr. Fields is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Fields, of Hollywood, Calif.

Miss Ruth Morgenstein and Miss Naomi Morgenstein, sisters of the bride, attended her as maids of honor. The bridegroom had as his best man Lieut. Leon Fields, U. S. A.

The bride wore a gown of white mousseline de soie, made on princess lines, with a train. The sleeves of the dress were puffed, tapering tightly from the elbow to the wrist line. Her veil was of tulle, edged with a deep lace border, and her headdress was a halo of satin with a cluster of lilies of the valley in back of the cap. She carried a bouquet of roses and shower of lilies of the valley.

A reception was held afterwards at the home of the bride.

Mrs. Milton Fields chose a navy and white ensemble for her going-away costume. She carried a silver fox scarf and wore an orchid corsage.

Of interest to Washingtonians is the announcement of the marriage which will take place in September of Miss Dorothy Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Thompson, of Indianapolis, Ind., and Thomas H. Williams, son of Mrs. Merrick Williams and the late Mr. Williams, of Bethesda, Md.

After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Bethesda, Md.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. Corliss E. Stinnette, who were married August 7, plan to make their home here in Washington when they return from their wedding trip.

Mrs. Stinnette, who before her marriage was Miss Josephine E. Renno, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Weaver. Mr. Stinnette is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Crocius E. Stinnette, of Lynchburg. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Brent, the aunt and uncle of the bride, with the Rev. Simpson B. Laugherty, pastor of the Memorial United Brethren Church, officiating.

The bride, who wore pink chantilly lace over taffeta, was attended by the sister of the bridegroom, Miss Grace Stinnette, who wore bouffant aqua organza.

Dull Appetite Is Spurred by Grilled Food

Sizzling Steak and Chops May Be Combined With Vegetables.

Time Tables Offered for Cookery of Varied Meats.

By Jean Green.

A SIZZLING STEAK or chop broiled medium and surrounded by crisp French fried onions and grilled tomato halves will satisfy even an indifferent appetite on damp days.

JEAN GREEN.

These tender cuts of meat broiled to order and served piping hot have a never ending appeal. Their tender delicate taste is highlighted by the charred brown crust that encases them.

The meat for these grills should be chosen wisely. The cuts of meat that can be prepared successfully by broiling are porterhouse, sirloin, club and filet mignon. If the lamb is cut in the form of a steak or chop there is virtually no part that cannot be broiled. But the loin, rib and shoulder chops are best.

Their cookery is so simple that it is difficult, if that makes sense. Their success depends on having the meat tender, the broiler preheated before the cooking starts, and then timing the meat as it cooks.

If you are not expert at cooking on the grill, then you will find this time chart I have prepared helpful. It gives the time according to the thickness of the cut. In ordering your steaks, have them cut between 1½ and 2 inches thick. This gives those juicy thick steaks that are so desirable. The lamb chops are best when cut ¾-inch thick.

Time Table.

Porterhouse steak, 1-inch thickness, 8 minutes (per pound) rare; 12 minutes, medium; 15 minutes, well done.

Sirloin or club steaks, 1½-inch thickness, 12 minutes, rare; 20 to 25 minutes, medium; 25 to 30 minutes, well done; 2-inch thickness, 15 minutes, rare; 20 to 25 minutes, medium; 35 to 40 minutes, well done.

Lamb rib and loin chops, ¾-inch thickness, 12 to 15 minutes, medium. Lamb shoulder chops, 1-inch thickness, 25 to 30 minutes, medium.

While you are planning your broiled dinner, include vegetables on the menu that can be successfully grilled. One new vegetable that you will certainly want to include os roasting ears.

Shuck the ears of corn, brush and clean in the usual way. Cook them in boiling salted water until slightly cooked. Skim them from the water, brush with butter, salt generously and place under broiler. The grains of the corn will swell and turn a delicate brown. The flavor is unequaled. It takes on a parched corn taste. This is also an excellent way to use the cooked leftover ears of corn on the cob and to my knowledge is the only successful one. If you have another solution write me about it.

Rings of pineapple sprinkled with brown sugar, halves of spiced peaches, bananas split and brushed with butter, halves of pears dusted with cinnamon and a sprinkle of ginger can add a decorative appearance as well as a pleasant flavor combination for these grilled dinners. They need be cooked only until golden brown.

Mixed Grill.

4 loin chops
2 tomatoes
¼ cup of bread crumbs
2 tablespoons of butter
Paprika
Prepared mustard
Salt
Pepper
2 bananas

Have the chops cut ¾ inch thick and have the fell (the thin papery tissue on the outside) removed. Turn the broiler on and set at 500 degrees. While the unit is heating, start preparation of the tomatoes.

Blend the bread crumbs with the salt, pepper and prepared mustard. About ¼ teaspoon of mustard is sufficient. Cut the tomatoes in half. Top each half with a tablespoon of the bread crumbs. Dot generously with the butter. Dust with paprika.

When the broiler is hot, place the chops on the broiler rack about 3½ inches from the flame. Add the tomato halves. Cook for 6 minutes. Turn the chops. Add the halves of banana brushed with butter and cook for 7 more minutes. Serve at once.

The sizzling platters that are available in most departments offer an excellent method of preparing and serving such a meal. The platters are made of heavy cast aluminum and have wooden handles. They come in different sizes and have a mat so that you can serve the complete grill at the table.

Grilled Dinner Affords Change in Menu

Timing is essential in the successful preparation of this grilled dinner. Thick lamb chops, halves of tomato and banana are being browned to a turn in this new type broiler unit. Only a salad and dessert are needed to complete the menu.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'Always Good and Kind,' Husband Now Neglects Bills, Stays Out Nights; What to Do, Asks Wife.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I have always said we loved each other. Of late, however, things have gotten so that I don't know what to do. Please tell me how to win him back. He goes out and leaves us (we have children) a great deal, and I get very upset. Also, he neglects to give me the money to pay bills and I don't like to let them carry over. He has always been a good and kind man, and I think if he were handled in the right way he might come around all right. We have never been romantic lovers, but I do love him intensely enough to wish to be everything he should want me to be.

* * * *

I don't know how to handle the money question tactfully. He doesn't want me to go to work. He makes a good salary, enough to pay our bills and give me a personal allowance, too, so that I might spend a little here and there, for charity and so on, as I please. But he doesn't do this. If he wasn't making it, I wouldn't expect it, and I would be very economical. Do you think this is an unreasonable wish of mine?

* * * *

I really believe he is interested in another woman, because he is out all hours of the night, and some letters appearing in your column have so nearly described my own case that I am growing worried. I am sure he cares for me and would prefer to remain at home, but I think he is too weak to resist invitations. Don't you think he badly needs the right kind of influence and to be held in check? How can I manage him? I am sick over it all. He has always loved me, his home and his children—and he means so much to me. Please tell me what to do.

Yours truly, M. B.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR M. B.: Don't let your husband know you suspect there is another woman in the picture, but tell him it just occurs to you that after 10 years of marriage (or however many years it is) he must be getting a little bored with the same old wife, and you wish you had a little money of your own to make yourself over into a dangerous woman. Using the whimsical approach, ask him if it wouldn't be possible for him to put you on an allowance from now on, so that you can gradually acquire a new wardrobe that will be a surprise to him; a new hair-do, and a new personality generally. If he says this is impossible, tell him very well then, you're going to be a dangerous woman anyway; and the first thing you are going to do is to find yourself a job—any old kind of a job—that will give you something to think about besides kitchen, church and children.

* * * *

By springing such a surprise, you will get him to wondering just how much or how little you do guess about his goings-on, and this will do much toward swinging his thoughts back to you and away from whoever the temptress may be. Don't betray the slightest jealousy of or prying interest in his late hours. Be just as intensely devoted as ever; but get him to guessing just what you are up to, if anything. He may figure that if he is passing through the "foolish age," perhaps the same ailment has just attacked you, and you'll bear a little closer supervision and a little more attention from now on.

* * * *

It might be well, too, to concentrate on making your home a gathering place for friends and congenial neighbors of evenings. When the children are tucked in bed, round up a foursome for bridge, or cocktails or gossip; have someone in to watch over the children occasionally, and go out yourself—to the home of friends or to a concert or movie or lecture. In other words, lift yourself by your very bootstraps out of the stodgy domestic routine you have no doubt lapsed into.

* * * *

It is my opinion that the situation can't really be corrected until you do have money of your own—either an allowance or an earned income. So if you can't get one, by all means get the other, even though it means revolutionizing the whole household arrangement. When your husband sees you mean business about changing your erstwhile personality and interests, it will force a change in his attitude toward you.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Contest Open For New Cup-Cake Recipes

OUR NEW favorite receipe contest invites recipes for cupcakes. These toothsome bits afford the convenient dessert for the school lunch. Or, decorated gayly and encased in swirls of thick frosting, they become a popular party dessert.

If you have a new recipe for them, enter it in this week's contest. You may find yourself the winner of one of our five cash prizes. The first prize is $3, the second $2, and the remaining three $1 each.

Any recipe for cupcakes that you think other readers would like to try is eligible in the contest. Recipes that date back to grandmother's day have an equal chance with the more modern ones.

To win, write out or type your favorite recipe on one side of the paper only. Mail it to Miss Jean Green, Favorite Recipe Contest Editor, The Washington Post, before Saturday, September 4.

Winners in the contest will be announced next week.

Belts Following Trend Toward Elegant Design

Paris (U.P.).—Belts are following the trend toward elegance by using elaborate rhinestone, silver or gold clasps on soft black antelope for afternoon. They are particularly lovely when the trim of handbag and belt follow the same motif.

Twisted strands of bright leather fastened with an anchor make a novelty sports belt, a plain black suede is brightened with a spray of strips of multi-colored suede, and embroidered leather is shown to blend with the color accents of one's ensemble.

Paste on Oil Cloth.

Paste oil cloth on your closet or pantry shelves. Spread the cloth generously with paste and quickly press it on the shelves. Then cover it with weights. (Books make practical weights for the purpose.) When the oil cloth has dried thoroughly the shelves may be washed and the cloth will never roll up.

Odd Parisian Hats Have Hidden Pocket

Mirror, Lipstick and Powder Can Be Carried in It.

Paris, (U.P.).—The felts have it where midsummer hats are concerned. Whether they are flattering broad-brimmed capelines that are so smart for the races and other outdoor occasions, turbans and glorified berets for town wear, or sports clothes—lightweight felts are the leading fabric.

Small hats continue their upturned tendency and are inclined to tip a bit backward from the face. Crowns are fairly high and are narrower at the top, although some wide-brimmed hats are crownless, leaving the hair exposed.

One cloche has stitched crown with a pocket when serves as a hiding place for a tiny mirror, powder and lipstick, and a part turban with a similar pocket can be converted into a handbag by carrying it by the double streamer at the back.

Ribbon and velvet are favored for trimming this season; some veils are used and flowers in natural colors still are smart. Flower headwear, continuing the motif of the gown, is a popular choice for evening wear.

"Dark" Chocolate.

Day, Evening Gowns For Winter Feature Embroidery Trims

PARIS (AP).—Evening and day dresses bedecked with the work of France's best embroidery artists were displayed in the final showings for the winter style season.

Designs representing birds of beautiful plumage and exposition rockets bursting above the Seine were offered by Mainbocher, who achieves dazzling effects with multi-colored paillettes used lavishly for evening wear and discreetly for day.

Tulle skirts scintillated with spangles in plumage designs or in mosaic patterns of stained glass suggestive of cathedral windows. Evening coats showed striking paillette treatments.

The narrow silhouette was varied in day and evening dresses by loose panels of material placed in the center of the back or details of gathered fullness. Day silhouettes were emphasized in straight line jackets reaching below the hip and in satin blouses along the same lines.

Long cape ensembles were shown, some lined with fur, with fur-trimmed dresses. Big bunches of flowers featured evening wear. Lace head dresses were shown for evening with face veils embroidered with colored paillettes representing eyebrows and lips.

Transparent Wrappings Guard Picnic Foods

Summer time is picnic time, and what a delight it is to go off to the beach or a shady spot in the afternoon and rest. Of course, dainty sandwiches, deviled eggs, salads, tempting fruits and what not are a necessary part of the perfect day. They can't be dainty or tempting, however, if care hasn't been taken in the kitchen to see that they are wrapped carefully. Sandwiches are so apt to become dry, as everyone knows—but the modern hostess has at her command bags of transparent sheeting which keep the breads from drying out and which retain all the original freshness of the foods, whether it be bread, cake, eggs, salads, pickles or fruit. What a comfort it is, too, to be able to choose your sandwich without having to open the wrapper to see if it be ham, chicken or cheese and to know that your tomato or plum, washed in your kitchen at home, is clean and ready to be eaten.

Cut-Down Hoe Is Ideal For Lazy Gardeners

For those who like lazy gardening, there is an ideal tool, easily made. It is the customary long-handled hoe, the blade of which has been almost completely cut away into a sickly-looking triangle. There is nothing like it on the market. With a file or hack saw, shape the thing into the desired form. Keep the cutting edge filed sharp. Use this hoe for rapid weeding between rows, around plants and elsewhere, because the blade is so narrow (not over 1½ inches wide anywhere).

Modified Bustles Appear With Frocks Of 1880's in Paris

Paris (AP).—Modified bustles—brought out of the mists of the 1880's—were featured at showings of new Paris fashions.

With back draperies recalling the elegant modes of the nineteenth century, romantic styles came back to the fashion stage. Victorian-inspired black velvet frocks were shown trimmed in old style lace. Striped satins and high waists sounded Directoire notes.

Patou showed embroideries of old style bugle beads replacing modern Paillettes. His tiny jetted muff dated back to the Edwardian period. Rare patterned white laces trimmed dinner gowns of black and deep blue velvets while tulle evening dresses were shown with full skirts and tight satin bodices. Narrow evening skirts were spiral trimmed with waving silk fringes.

The new Florentine red created by Patou is a light wine shade; his armour green is the color of ancient metal. A great deal of black is being used and many black afternoon dresses had transparent yokes and sleeves under fitted jackets.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Frivolous young members of the House like to refer to the Senate as "the House of Lords"—especially within the hearing of Senators . . . A quarter of a mile away the top part of the Columbus Monument in front of the Union Station resembles a skull.

* * * *

Young Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge is one of Washington's truly dazzling beauties . . . Those organ recitals at the Shoreham are a pious touch for the cocktail hour . . . Sheila Barrett, who's worth hearing—and seeing—at the Capitol, denies Washington produces no homegrown celebs, and points to Ina Claire and Helen Hayes; and I point to her.

* * * *

Young Washingtonians like to bicycle around the Monument by moonlight, their headlights twinkling on the park-bench romantics. . . . Illustration of the unwieldiness of the House: In a speech one member confessed that in eight months of daily sessions he had never laid eyes on a certain one of his colleagues.

"—the presidential family tree."

* * * *

Whether he's toasted first or last, Governor General McNutt likes the Philippine climate better than the academic atmosphere of Indiana University, whose presidency he was first offered not last week but two years ago, and where you're seldom toasted at all . . . Anyhow, Mr. McNutt has his eyes on another presidency . . . A small-scale statue in the Hall of Fame makes a departed statesman look pathetic amid the heroic statues around it.

* * * *

Beside Senators Holt and Neely of West Virginia, there seems to be another set of colleagues who don't speak—that is, to each other—Senators Harrison and Bilbo, of Mississippi . . . President Roosevelt, says Look Magazine, is related to 11 past Presidents . . . And (ask his alarmed critics) how many future ones?

* * *

The new Loretta Young picture certainly treats the Spanish war as something of a joke . . . Touche at the Press Club: "He's a sob-sister in pants . . . Yesterday I not only got lost in the park for the fourth time, but almost drowned to boot.

* * * *

Though he died 4 months before the Court bill was emasculated, the late Senator Bachman (Tennessee) was listed as a "betrayer" of Mr. Roosevelt's court program by one of the embattled commentators . . . Women are possessive; a gorgeous California girl friend of Senator Bob Reynolds (North Carolina) sent him a clipped paragraph from this column, with a reproachful comment about his rhythmic dancing with another girl.

* * * *

So austere is the atmosphere in the white marble Supreme Court Building that even the tourists don't dare drop chewing gum wrappers on the floor . . . Apparently the American official list of the ten greatest literary geniuses of all time consists of Bacon, Herodatus, Goethe, Shakespeare, Moliere, Moses, Dante, Homer, Milton and Aristotle—these are the ten names most conspicuously displayed around the foyer of the Library of Congress

"—his colleagues adorned him."

* * * *

Another statesman who has my indorsement is Senator Townsend, of Delaware—father of six children. . . . Another reason why Representatives like to eat in the Senate dining room is that prices seem a trifle higher in the Representatives' hasherie.

* * * *

Corned beef and cabbage is on the Senate menu almost every day, but the New Deal can't be a complete democratic success until roast beef hash becomes a fixture there as well . . . One of the Senators who had been out late the night before dozed off in his seat the final day of the session, and his sympathetic colleagues adorned him with flowers.

* * * *

A statesman who is a bit proud of his decade of service at the Capitol was miffed when a pretty young secretary in a Government department failed to recognize him when he called to see her boss. He rebuked her a little petulantly, reflecting on her intelligence and her fitnes for her job. A spirited girl from Dixie, she listened quietly for a moment, then flared up.

"Sir," she said, "my father is now quite old, considerably older than you are, but I think he is still able to give you a good hiding."

D. C. Stamp Collectors At Asheville Convention

Harry B. Mason, of Washington, was the first registrant at the forty-third annual convention of the Society of Philatelic Americans, which opened yesterday at Asheville, N. C.

Other members of the Washington included Dr. M. G. Skinner, H. H. Marsh, Mrs. Wilna C. Rice, Fred R. Rice, J. N. Nappen, E. V. Haines and William M. Stuart.

Many Roads Closed and Homes Isolated by Downpours.

High waters on the Potomac and high tide that have taken two lives were expected to give Washington a small "flood" last night, the third this year.

Two colored youths drowned in the swift currents of the Anacostia and Rock Creek.

Twenty-five people, including a seven-day-old baby, were rescued by police and firemen after they had been marooned in their homes in Bungalow Town, a section of Anacostia.

Roads in Rock Creek Park were closed, and the Washington-Baltimore boulevard near Bladensburg. A water main broke in Arlington.

The Weather Bureau said the sunshine which broke through the skies for the first time in five days yesterday would continue today. The rains totaled 5.39 inches, 1.39 inches more than average for the whole month of August.

Freight trains stopped between Hyattsville and Potomac Yards because of a washout along the line. It may be a day before traffic is resumed.

At Marlboro the western branch of the Patuxent River, normally a small creek, covered the road leading to the race track for 100 yards. It was 6 feet deep in places. Officials canceled the racing program for the day.

The other boy was Orlando Reed, also 12, of the 600 block of Forty-ninth street northeast, who got beyond his depth under the bridge at Forty-ninth and Deane avenue northeast. He was pulled out by John Woodson, but the fire rescue squad was unable to revive him.

While there was water over the seawall at Bolling Field yesterday, no water crept into Washington Airport, frequent victim of the Potomac. Plane service was uninterrupted.

A Coast Guard boat and three men were shipped to Washington by truck from Baltimore to aid in the rescue work in the Bungalow Town community, and to be available if needed for further riverfront evacuations.

The Potomac was over its banks above Washington yesterday, and flooded numerous summer cottages and homes. The crest of the high waters was due around midnight last night, at the same time the tide would be at its highest.

Southern Maryland roads, hard hit by the rains, were open yesterday except in the Bladensburg area and near the Marlboro track. Work crews last night were pouring gravel into washouts in Prince Georges, Anne Arundel, Charles and St. Marys Counties.

Roads in Loudoun County, Va., were hardest hit. Little River went over the highways yesterday on Route 7, 15 miles east of Leesburg, isolating some farms for several hours.

Goose Creek began to rise late yesterday morning, blocking Route 50, and washing out a 15-foot fill on Route 7. A light temporary bridge was put up over the gap. About 20 secondary highways, bridges washed out in Loudoun County alone.

Post Staff Photos.

Nearly 1,000 colored children from Washington's recreation centers put on a hobby show yesterday at Dunbar School which proved that it is possible to make something decorative and useful out of practically nothing. Burlap bags, shoe boxes, magazine covers, stones, even vegetables were included among the varied materials which made up the articles on display.

The exhibition consisted of projects completed this summer at 34 community centers, playgrounds, and settlement houses. In a central booth was a group made up of the best individual work done at each unit.

Among the most novel displays in this booth was a miniature tropical scene composed entirely of vegetables. Labelled "Cabbages and Kings," it included a regal figure with a green pepper and two carrots for a body, peas for buttons, and a cabbage leaf for a cloak, looking out over a sea on which floated a banana canoe containing two more equally vegetarian figures.

The most decorative display was a salad bowl made, according to its label, from paper toweling and newspapers.

Other types of work on display were children's dresses, embroidered towels, drawings, paintings, masks and about everything else that can be made with two hands and not much money. Outstanding among the fine arts exhibits was that of Southwest House, which had on display a hand-painted screen, some crayon drawings and a collection of ceramics which would have done credit to much older artists.

Burrville Playground's show was featured by what appeared to be high-class chinaware, but actually was a collection of skillfully colored paper plates. Young Community Center's booth contained a doll's house made of strips cut from magazine covers, shellacked and pasted on cardboard. The same technique was shown in desk sets and several pairs of beach sandals.

In several booths were old cold cream bottles and pickle jars which had been converted into attractive vessels merely by gluing twisted strips of brightly colored crepe paper around them. Boxes collected from a generous shoe dealer were the building materials for "Boxville Village," exhibited by Garrison Community Center. In the steeple of the village church hung a bell which once was used as a Christmas tree ornament.

Two inexpensive types of book ends were shown. One was a pair of rocks on which splashy designs had been painted. Another consisted of two halves of an oatmeal box covered with strips of colored paper.

One broad-minded recreation center director had on view a crayon caricature of herself which one of her charges had executed in a mischievous mood.

Burlap sacks were converted into table runners and knitting bags. Old cereal boxes were upholstered to give them the appearance of miniature chairs and sofas and fitted up as sewing kits.

Groups exhibiting their projects included:

Four in Alexandria Also Ask Share in Estate Left by Mrs. Ida Wood, Who Piled Up Nearly Million on Hotel Floor.

Three Washington residents and four from Alexandria, Va., were listed among the 1,093 claimants for the $887,000 estate of Mrs. Ida E. Wood, wealthy eccentric, at a hearing in New York City yesterday before Surrogate James A. Foley.

Mrs. Wood is believed by the local claimants to have been a sister of the late George Wood, Alexandria, Va., river captain. Ida Wood left Alexandria many years ago, they say, and married Benjamin Wood in New York City.

The three claimants here are Mrs. Lucy Guazza, of 201 D street northeast; Mrs. Carrie P. Johnson, of 1830 A street southeast, and Mrs. Mary J. Woodward, of the same address. All said they were nieces.

Claimants from Alexandria are Mrs. Gauzza's sister, Mrs. Grace Violet, and her three brothers, Marshall, Ashby and Melvin Wood. Another sister, Mrs. Mae Hardy, of Newport News, Va., is also filing a claim.

Mrs. Wood died at 93 in a New York City hotel on March 12, 1932. She had been a recluse many years. Scattered about her room were bundles of musty bills totaling nearly $1,000,000. In a rusted old trunk, one of 40 in her apartment, were diamonds she wore at the Infanta Eulalia's ball in 1893, when she glittered in international society.

Highland Farms Fights Milk Rule

Boy Shoots Chum, 14.

Edward Moile, 14, was slightly injured in the forehead yesterday when his companion, Robert McGinniss, 14, 1450 Hemlock street northwest, accidently discharged the air rifle they were playing with in Rock Creek Park.

Tom Moore, 37, D. C. Gambler, Dead in South

Long Illness Ends Numbers Organizer's Career in Greenville, N. C.

Thomas Carlton Moore, 37, widely known for many years in Washington's gambling and sports circles, died last night at his home at Greenville, N. C., after a lingering illness.

The Associated Press reported Moore returned to his home at Greenville two months ago from Washington. Funeral services will be held at 4:30 p. m. Saturday. His mother, two sisters and seven brothers survive in Greenville.

For eight years or more, through the height of prosperity, Moore was a familiar figure in Washington's gambling world. He owned several gambling houses through the Northwest section of the city, one of them on Fourteenth street near the business section.

A former tobacco salesman, Moore was among the first to develop the numbers racket on an organized basis controlling most of the Northwest territory.

At one time he was rumored engaged to Fifi D'Orsay, movie star, and they were seen frequently together.

On at least two occasions he was the object of underworld hijackers.

In 1933 Moore received a tip that he was to be ambushed in his apartment. Police were notified and Detective Frank Brass, now detective sergeant attached to the pickup squad, shot his way into the room, capturing four armed men.

C. A. Cogan on Vacation.

Charles A. Cogan, Washington Gas Light Co. employe for 25 years, will leave tomorrow for a vacation in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, and will attend the general convention of Jehovah's Witnesses in Columbus, Ohio, September 15 to 25.

7-Day-Old Saved From Flood

Seven days to the minute after he was born, Thomas Everett Price, son of Wilbur and Mary Francis Price, had a real experience with floods yesterday. He was rescued from the swirling waters that eddied around his home in the 100 block of Yuma street after Thursday's downpour.

Brunette 'Raised' $1 Bill To a 10-Spot, Officers Claim

An amateur counterfeiting job led to the arrest yesterday of Mrs. Marjorie Graffiun, pretty 28-year-old brunette, of 1228 Sixteenth street northwest, who, police said, tried to make $1 do the work of $10.

The woman was turned over to Treasury agents by Detective Sergeants Joe Shimon and William V. Christian, and will be arraigned today before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. She was booked on a charge of "passing counterfeit" and spent last night at the Woman's Bureau.

Sergt. Shimon said she had a tracing of a $10 bill in her purse. She admitted she changed one bill and passed it in downtown Washington, Shimon said.

"She also had two checks in her purse, which she had already signed and was getting ready to pass, and a letter from a boy friend," Shimon declared. "The letter told her to 'sit tight,' that the boy friend soon would be out of jail and everything would be all right again."

New D. C. Trolleys Shown to Officials

Officials headed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Maj. Ernest W Brown, superintendent of police, attended a demonstration last night of 3 of the 45 streamlined street cars put into service today by the Capital Transit Co.

The cars, representing an investment of approximately $720,000, are equipped with rubber shock and noise absorbers and can reach a speed of 45 miles. There are other features.

Job Promiser Missing After Taking $4 Fee

Utility Board Asks Budget Be Doubled

$115,720 and 17 New Employes Asked in Estimates.

Fire Department Cuts Its Cost $20,316 to $2,449,204.

By James D. Secrest.

The Public Utilities Commission asked for $115,720—nearly double its present budget—in estimates for next year submitted to the District Commissioners yesterday.

The commission is allowed $61,500 in the current District appropriations act. The new budget would provide a staff of 37, an increase of 17.

The Fire Department submitted estimates that constituted the first decrease under this year's allowances. The drop was $20,316, or from $2,469,520 to $2,449,204.

A reduction in the requests for fire-fighting equipment was responsible.

The Public Utilities Commission included the salary of the people's counsel, $7,500, in its estimates, although the last Congress refused to make an appropriation for the office, vacant since last fall, and the commission is not anxious to have it revived.

New positions proposed by the commission are:

Two engineers to assist its present chief engineer, an inspector of electric meters, a valuation accountant, three senior accountants and auditors, an investigator, a senior accounting and auditing assistant and an information clerk.

In addition, the commission asked for another inspector, two more accountants and auditors, and a messenger-chauffeur.

The commission pointed out that it last year was allowed only one more position than it had in 1913, the year of its creation, despite the great increase in its work. It recalled, moreover, that it had ten more employes in 1934 than at present.

The staff of the commission was cut almost in half by a chairman of the House sub-committee on District appropriations in 1934.

Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom proposed in his estimates to transfer 11 per diem employes of the Fire Department to the ranks of privates, at a cost of $24,000. No additional firemen are requested.

An item of $16,784 for an addition to No. 22 enginehouse and for repairs to the new heating plant was the only major construction proposal.

Col. Bryden Shifted To Fort George Meade

Col. William Bryden, who has been on duty at the War Department, as chief of the mobilization branch of the operations and training division, has been transferred to Fort George Meade, Md., the War Department announced yesterday. Maj. John P. Ratay, who has been studying at the Army War College, Berlin, Germany, has been ordered to duty at the War College, Fort Humphreys, D. C.

U. F. W. Affiliates Two Local Unions

Two more local unions have affiliated with the United Federal Workers of America, the U. F. W. A. announced last night.

One was Local No. 31, of employes at the Capitol, and the other, No. 32, a union of employes of the Tennessee Valley Authority. This brings the Federal Workers' membership to 4,200.

Meanwhile, Eleanor Nelson, U. F. W. A. secretary-treasurer, announced William H. McReynolds, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, has agreed to issue an order stating it is the policy of the Customs Service to give preference to eligible employes on the promotions' list.

Robbery Suspect Is Held for Jury

Judge Robert E. Mattingly in Police Court yesterday ordered Allen E. Coates, of the 2100 block of Tenth street, held under $2,000 bond for the grand jury on a robbery charge. Coates pleaded guilty. He allegedly pointed a pistol at a couple parked in a car.

PETE APPLETON GIVES CHISOX 3 HITS; NATS WIN, 5-0

The Washington Post Sports

12 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, AUGUST 28, 1937 X ****

This Morning

Walter Johnson Rates Bob Feller High.

By Shirley Povich.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 27.

It was the old fire horse in him, I guess, but anyway Walter Johnson found his way to Comiskey Park this afternoon. There, capitulating to the nostalgic urge, he watched the White Sox struggle in vain against Pete Appleton and the Nats even as his own pitching used to cause the White Sox of his day, and every other ball team of the era, to struggle and finally give up.

POVICH.

He was saying, though, before the game, that it was a crying shame the way the Cleveland Club is treating young Bob Feller, who last winter was being hailed as another Walter Johnson.

"It is a crying shame the way the Cleveland Club is treating young Bob Feller," Johnson said.

"They've got something there, but they're ruining a fine young pitcher. I was out here in Chicago last Sunday and watched him work. He got beat, but the Cleveland Club asked for it. They're making a circus out of him instead of a pitcher.

* * * *

"Looks like most every time they pitch him they put young Feller on the spot before one of those big Sunday crowds. Last Sunday there were 32,000 in the park because they advertised Feller would pitch, and, of course, the kid was nervous. That's what beat him. They forget he's only a kid—just 18—and he can't take those big crowds in stride yet.

* * * *

"Besides, all the home folks from Iowa came up to see Feller pitch and that didn't help any. It wasn't a contest, it was a carnival. Feller's got all the stuff in the world, but no kid can be whooped up the way they're doing with him and pitch his best. If they leave him alone, he's a wonder.

* * * *

"You know what happened to him out here last Sunday—pitched five innings, and allowed only two hits, and got beat 5-0 because he gave seven bases on balls. He had plenty on the ball, but he was trying to pitch for the 32,000 and the home folks and it was just too much for him. He lost his control in that kind of a spot.

"They pitched him on a week-day in Cleveland the other afternoon and look at the difference it made. You know what he did that day."

* * * *

And it certainly was a striking contrast. On that afternoon, against the Red Sox, Feller was all that the Indians had hoped he would be, and more. Far, far from the shouting and the tumult and with the home folks safely around the hearth in Iowa, and with only a routine crowd at the ball game, Feller reverted to the prodigy pitcher.

* * * *

He gave the Red Sox only two hits that day and shattered to smithereens the season's strikeout mark by fanning 18 of the Bostonians. That figure equaled what had stood for more than 20 years as the American League strikeout record until Feller, himself, came along and broke it with 17 strikeouts against the Athletics last year.

* * * *

"I dunno if he is as fast as I was, Johnson was saying, "But he's the fastest thing I've seen in 20 years. That boy can pour that ball in there. Doesn't look to me that he gets his body behind like I used to. He doesn't have that kind of sweeping motion that brought all of my back and shoulder muscles into play when I was heaving the ball.

"But there's no doubt that apple is steaming when it comes up to the hitter. Feller's got a powerful strong shoulder and nice timing and that's where he gets his power.

* * * *

"I was luckier than he is, I guess. The crowds weren't so big when I broke in and started getting a reputation. They didn't make so much holler about ball players back in 1907 and three or four thousand was a big crowd. Shucks, I pitched before that many people back on the sandlots in Idaho and Kansas.

"Looks to me like Feller's fast ball sails. Mine used to spin. That's why he's having a little trouble with his control, I guess. Those sailers take off when they get up to a hitter and they're tougher to throw to a spot. All this stuff you've heard about the hop on my fast ball was the bunk. I never saw a pitch I threw hop even an inch. Feller's sailer has a hop on it, though.

"I suppose you'd have to call Feller a disappointment this season because of the times he has been beaten, but there isn't a manager in the league who wouldn't grab him up. He's the most encouraging disappointment I ever did see."

Omaha Golf Star Defeats Ward, 1 Up

By the Associated Press.

Portland, Oreg., Aug. 27.—Defending titleholder Johnny Fischer passed out of the picture and chief challenger Johnny Goodman was forced to the thirty-sixth hole today in smashing semifinals of the national amateur golf championship.

Fischer, his game shattered, bowed to the superior golf of 29-year-old Ray Billows, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 6 and 5—an overwhelming defeat of a champion who had raced to the semifinal competition by nearly comparable scores over previous opponents.

Goodman, 1933 national open champion and prime favorite here when the field took off Monday on the Alderwood Country Club course, had to call on his finest golf to defeat a sophomore in major tournament competition, Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Tacoma, on the home hole of a sensational battle.

It was the greatest fight of the tournament—a veteran campaigner at times with his back to the wall calling on every shot in his bag to hold off the challenge of a curly-haired youth who matched shot for shot. Neither asked nor gave quarter.

The Goodman-Ward thriller completely vershadowed the one-sided contest that saw Fischer's game break to the point where every shot was an effort, every hole another nightmare.

Shoots Subpar.

Goodman shot subpar golf to hold a two-up lead on Ward, 24-year-old State tax clerk, when they went to lunch.

The husky Omahan went out in 35 and was home in 34, a 69 that chopped 3 strokes from par 72. Ward, meanwhile, carded a 1-under par 71.

On the second 18 they reversed positions—Ward was low with a 71 and Goodman went up to 73.

An eagle 3, conceded by Goodman, squared the match at the twenty-first for the boy from the Pacific Northwest. His ball was dead while Goodman was just on in 4.

Ward's final chance to square the match saw him miss an 8 foot putt on the thirty-sixth. Both carded 5s, and the close battle ended to the applause of several thousand galleryites.

After winning his earlier matches with almost effortless ease, he paired off with a slightly built youngster with a crouching stance, whose irons clicked a victory march as they fought it out along the narrow, treacherous fairways.

Billows, printing company salesman, who learned his golf in Racine, Wis., six years ago, and since has become a nationally formidable competitor, outshot Fischer from tee to green.

Irons, Putting Deadly.

The morning round was fairly even, Billows holding a 1-up lead at the ninth and maintaining it as they went to lunch. Fischer was forced, however, to card a birdie 4 on his thirteenth to win one hole back.

The first nine of the afternoon saw the defending titleholder break. His tee shots hooked into trouble continually, he lost his boldness to the greens and putts of 3 and 4 feet, usually easy, failed to drop.

Billows turned in 38, 34 for a par 72 on the first 18, compared to Fischer's 39, 35—74. The third nine, disastrous for Fischer, posted a 41 for him and a 36 for his rival. Billows was 1 over standard figures when the match ended. Fischer finished 7 over. The thirtieth hole, at a time when the match was dormie, was the only one taken by Fischer in the afternoon.

12 Two-Year-Olds Enter Rich Hopewell Stakes

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Led by Milky Way Farm's Tiger, carrying top weight of 126 pounds, 12 two-year-olds were named to start in the $25,000 guaranteed Hopeful Stakes, featured attraction of the closing day program that will be contested over six and a half furlongs tomorrow.

The Milky Way entry, Tiger, Skylarking and C. Note, was quoted an even money favorite. Fighting Fox and Stormscud, Coupled as the Belair-Wheatley entry, were second choice at 2 to 1.

Eagles Beat Stars, 14-6, On Break

Last Quarter Fumble Is Converted Into Winning Goal.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 27.—In a preview of the coming football season, the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Professional League, tonight converted a break into a touchdown drive that paved the way for a 14-to-6 victory over the Eastern College All-Stars before a crowd of 20,000 at Temple Stadium.

The break came early in the last quarter when an attempted lateral by John Hudasky, of Columbia, was fumbled and recovered by Herschel Stockton, of the Eagles, on the All-Stars' 24. A moment earlier, the Collegians, leading 6-0, had stopped an Eagles' drive on their own 30.

The tide turned for the pros, however, when "Swede" Hanson and "Dynamite" Dave Smukler, two former Temple stars, in successive line plunges, made a first down on the All-Stars' eight. Here, "Woody" Sponaugle, of Franklin and Marshall, and Harvey Serfass, of Gettysburg, halted three plays with only a gain of three yards.

The Eagles fooled the collegians on fourth down, however. Joe Carter, a sub end, raced into the clear on the goal line and took a short forward from Smukler that tied the score. Smukler then booted the extra point from placement to give the Eagles the lead.

A few minutes later, after the revived Eagles had halted a counter-drive by the All-Stars on the Eagles' 36, Smukler broke loose off tackle and raced 55 yards to the All-Stars' 35. Smukler left the game at this point and was replaced by John Kusko, another former Temple fullback.

Giants Split With Bucs; Muff Chance for Lead

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 27.—The New York Giants, in hot pursuit of the pace-making Chicago Cubs, gained no better than an even break today with the Pittsburgh Pirates in two hotly contested games at the Polo Grounds.

Blanked 1 to 0 in the opener by the combined four-hit flinging of Lefty Ed Brandt and Mace Brown, the Giants squeezed out a 3-to-2 decision in the second game with the unexpected aid of a five-hit pitching chore by Al Smith, making his first start in six weeks.

The Giants lost no ground in the National League race. They remained two games behind the Cubs, who were held idle by the rain in Boston. Meantime, third-place Cardinals, by dropping a pair to the Phillies, fell five lengths back of the Giants. The Pirates, in fourth position, are a game behind St. Louis.

Harris Mentioned As Pirates' Boss For 1938 Season

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 27.—Manager Bucky Harris, of the Washington American League team, was prominently mentioned here today as the next manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Believed "through" at Washington, Harris is expected to move over into the senior circuit, a source close to the Pirate front office said. There has been the usual flare-up and discontent among Pirate fandom following the club's nosedive after the headlong start the Buccaneers made in April and May.

"There's no truth whatever to the story," Bill Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh club, said today. "It is the product of some imaginative New York sports writer's brain. Pie Traynor will be here in 1938."

Clark Griffith, president of the Nats, told a Post representative last night that he knew nothing of the story. "It all news to me," Mr. Griffith said. "I don't believe it, anyhow."

Averill's Blow Gives Indians 5-to-3 Victory

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 27.—The Indians regained the .500 bracket in the American League today with a 5-to-3 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics in which Earl Averill rifled his thirteenth home run of the season.

Lee (Buck) Ross went the route for the Mackmen but the Tribe's starting pitcher, Denny Galehouse, was driven from the mound in the fifth inning. Lloyd Brown, who replaced him, held the Athletics scoreless the rest of the way.

Averill sent the ball out of the park in the third inning with John Kroner on the runways. Billy Sullivan, catcher, collected three of eight hits allowed by Ross.

Parker Wins Way Into Third Round

Seigniory Club, Quebec, Aug. 27 (AP).—Frankie Parker, of Milwaukee, Wis., and New York, second-ranking tennis player in the United States and a member of the victorious Davis Cup team, led a strong delegation of Americans into the third round of the Seigniory Club Tennis tournament today.

Parker opened play in the second round by routing Leo LaBlanc, of Montreal, 6—1, 6—0.

Gehrig's Bat Aids Yanks In 4-3 Win

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 27.—It was Red Ruffing and Jim Bottomley day at Sportsman's Park today, but Lou Gehrig stole the show.

"Iron Horse" Lou clouted his twenty-ninth homer to start the New York Yankees' scoring, and then doubled and carried the winning run across himself in the eighth inning as the world champions nosed out the Browns, 4 to 3. Gehrig also had a single for his third hit.

The victory, coupled with the second-place Detroit Tigers' defeat at the hands of the Boston Red Sox, boosted the Yankees' American League lead to 11½ games.

Ruffing and Bottomley were honored by a delegation of fans from Nokomis, Ill. So, Ruffing, pitching out of turn, hurled the first inning for the Yanks, and Bottomley did the first-base chores for the Browns.

Griff Hurler Turns In 3d '37 Shutout

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—The score: Washington, 5; Chicago, 0. The winning pitcher—you guessed it—Peter Jablonowski Appleton, specialist in shut-out victories.

Even as he had authored Washington's only two previous shut-out triumphs of the 1937 season, Pete Appleton today achieved the Nats' third with a masterful three-hit performance that set the White Sox back on their heels.

It was the choicest bit of pitching turned in by a Washington hurler all season. Out of the fingers of Appleton streamed a magnificent assortment of curves, and into the keeping of the Nats passed the ball game.

Thus, Appleton became the first American Leaguer to pitch three er, uh—shucks, there's no other word for it—three shutouts. Until today, he was tied with a slew of pitchers for shutout honors.

Relied on Curves.

He was something to watch today. Pete was relying chiefly on that down-breaking curve—his fast ball isn't much—and had the runless Sox batting the ball into the dirt for the most part. He gave up a single to Kreevich in the opening inning, a double to Radcliff in the fourth, and a single to Berger in the fifth, and that sums up the Sox hits.

He walked five batters and hit one, but in the clutches he was superb. In fact, only once was it necessary for one of his pals in the field to come up with other than a routine catch. That was in the second inning when Buddy Lewis stabbed a line drive off Radcliff's bat.

In those last four innings, when he had his third shut-out within his grasp, Appleton didn't relent. He reached out and held it securely by the simple procedure of holding the White Sox hitless.

In fact, the Nats as a whole were pretty good. They collected eight hits off bespectacled Bill Dietrich before driving him off the premises in the fifth and they nicked Thornton Lee for an eighth hit. They jammed seven of their hits into their two big innings—the third and the fifth.

They got around to winning the ball game in the second inning with the help of Rip Radcliff, the Sox's unskilled leftfielder. Joe Kuhel launched proceedings with a single to left and Myer coaxed a walk out of Dietrich. Freddie Sington struck out but Rick Ferrell delivered what eventuated as the game-winning blow.

It was a single to left that rocketed off Rick's bat and Kuhel romped home. Myer had pulled up at second and Ferrell had stopped at first when they noted that Radcliff was booting the ball all over the left-field premises. So, Myer came home, too, and Ferrell continued to second. Then, with two out, Mel Almada banged a single to left and the Nats had a 3-0 lead.

Almada Starts Things.

They packed three more of their hits into the fifth inning. Almada instigated matters then when he pushed a single past Haas. Buddy Lewis put him on second with a single to left and Travis moved his pals along with a sacrifice bunt. Simmons, in this crisis, moved 'em home with a well-tagged single to left. In fact, the blow moved Dietrich out of the box and in came Thornton

Frankhouse Enters Hall of Fame; Beats Reds in No-Hit Game

Mound Star Wins, 5 to 0, In 7 Innings

Brooklyn Veteran, 33, Aided by Rain; 2d Game Postponed.

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 27.—Fred Frankhouse, an up-and-down curveballer who has tossed around the National League for ten years without any remarkable success, crashed baseball's hall of fame today with a no-hit, no-run pitching performance.

The 33-year-old member of Brooklyn's lowly Dodgers turned the trick by a 5-to-0 margin against the Cincinnati Reds, although his job was made easy when the game was called after two Reds were out in the eighth inning. His no-hit performance was the eighty-ninth in baseball history.

The game was to have been the first game of a double-header, but the downpour cut it short at that point.

Although seven men reached first against Frankhouse. He gave up six bases on balls, and a seventh Red, Ival Goodman, drew a life when Jimmy Bucher fumbled a play in the first inning. Not a runner got to third for the Reds as Frankhouse fanned three and breezed in without trouble.

The victory was added demonstration that there's no telling where a no-hit game, like lightning is going to land. Frankhouse has never shown any particular ability to keep enemy batters from touching him freely. As a member of the St. Louis Cardinals, Boston Bees and Dodgers through his ten-year major league career, up to the end of last season, he was tagged for 1,690 hits in 1,578 innings.

Hardware Merchant Is Nation's New Champion of Trapshooters

By the Associated Press.

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 27.—F. G. Carroll, 35-year-old hardware merchant of Brecksville, Ohio, emerged from the greatest scoring spree in trapshooting history today with the thirty-eighth annual Grand American Handicap championship, smashing 100 straight targets from the 19-yard line.

On his heels, with 99 of 100, were 11 gunners, a lone miss keeping each from the hall of fame, despite the fact that their scores would have been good enough to win 31 of the previous 37 "Grands."

Don Shelton, 17-year-old Marseilles, Ill., high school youth, won the shoot-off of the 99 score: beaking 25 in a row to take second place. It was his first trip to the tourney.

Three other Illinois shooters took the next places, giving that State four of the first five berths. A. B. Springer, of Metropolis, Ill., was third; Herb Bush, of Eaton, Ill., who finished second a year ago, was fourth, and Ray Falcon, of Evanston, Ill., finished fifth.

Others with 99's for the regular shoot, but who took lower berths in the shoot-off, were R. A. King, of Wichita Falls, Tex.; Stanley Meadows, of Des Moines, Ia.; Forest McNeir, of Houston, Tex.; Bruce Sloan, of Albany, Ky.; F. J. Snider, of Dayton, Ohio; Harry Kreschman, of Hamilton, Ontario, and Charles Huntington, of Eureka, Mo.

The victory was worth about $3,000 to Carroll, $2,400 in cash and the remainder in medals and trophies. The new champion is 6 feet 4 inches tall and weighs 215 pounds.

"When I hit that first target, I knew I was in for a swell day," Carroll said. "I came down here with the definite idea of winning enough to pay for my vacation. I did it."

Ten former champions were among a field of 940, but all fell short of their goal of becoming the first person to take the title twice. Two other winners, Charley (Sparrow) Young, of Springfield, Ohio., who won in 1926 with a perfect 100 from the 23-yard line, the record for the tourney, and W. Henderson, of Lexington, Ky., who won the "Grand" and the North American singles and doubles championships in 1914, were present, but did not shoot.

Mrs. Lela Hall, of Strasburg, Mo., winner of the women's North American clay target title the last three years, led the feminine contingent today with 98 of 100, the finest score ever turned in by a woman shooter in the Grand, and a mark good enough to have won at least 20 of the previous tourneys. Three years ago she finished third in the big shoot, turning a score of 97 from the 19-yard line. She shot today from 21 yards.

C. T. Stevens, of Zanesville, Ohio, broke 98 of 100 from 23 yards to capture the professional championship.

Fifty of America's foremost long-distance swimmers, including among them this year's national champion, Elwood Wooding, of Ohio State University, will take to the water this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the old Chesapeake and Ohio Canal for the thirteenth annual three-mile race for the President's cup.

According to William J. Stephenson, vice chairman of the committee, the race is the only strictly amateur affair in the President's Cup series. It was started in 1925, by President Calvin Coolidge, and has been staged annually since by the Canoe Club.

The race will be preceded by a water carnival, starting at 1 o'clock, which will include comedy canoe racing, life-saving demonstrations, surf board exhibitions and an exhibition of expert canoe handling by Audrey Bagley and James Birch, of the Potomac Boat Club, recognized locally as a pair of expert canoists.

The District's big hope is expected to come from one of the following: Ernest Boggs, of the Y. M. C. A. team, local long distance champion, and for the last three years the first District swimmer to finish in the race; Max Rote, of Shoreham Swimming Club, District 100-yard and 200-yard record-holder and also champion in those divisions, who will be competing in his first long-distance swim. John McKnight and Karl Vartia, both of the Washington Canoe Club, who have made excellent time in practice swims over the course, are expected to be in the vanguard of the local club's team.

Marion Miley, Betty Jameson Reach Finals

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 27.—Marion Miley, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Betty Jameson, of San Antonio, Tex., advanced into the finals of the thirty-fifth annual women's Western golf tournament at the Town and Country Club course today with impressive victories over Marian McDougal, of Portland, Oreg., and Beatrice Barrett, of Minneapolis.

Miss Miley shot even par golf for 13 holes to score a convincing 6-and-5 victory over Miss McDougall, Pacific Northwest champion. Miss Jameson, trans-Mississippi titlist, eliminated Miss Barrett, Minnesota State champion, 4 adn 3, being one under par for 15 holes.

The 36-hole finals will be played tomorrow, starting at 9:30 a. m.

Doubles Play Is Rained Out

By the Associated Press.

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 27.—The national doubles tennis tournament at Longwood was washed out today for the second time, forcing officials to put over the finals in the men's, women's, mixed, veterans' and father-son division until Monday.

Today's scheduled program, which included two men's and three women's quarter-final matches, with players of five nations participating, will be played tomorrow.

The rain afforded Baron Gottfried von Cramm and Henner Henkel, of Germany, the top-seeded foreign players who are favored to compete for the championship against title defenders, Don Budge and Gene Mako, 48 hours rest before engaging Martyn Buxby, of Miami, and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., for one of the lower half semifinals brackets.

Women's Tourney Moves to Columbia

Play in the Women's District Tennis League tournament yesterday was confined to consolation matches, but Willie O'Steen, No. 3 seeded player, gained the semifinal round of the championship tourney when she was awarded her quarter-final match scheduled with Mrs. Kathleen Baker, by default.

Meanwhile changes in plans will see the remaining quarter-final match between Gertrude Smith and Mary Ryan, No. 2 entry, played today on the Columbia Country Club courts at 3 p. m. Other play has been on the Rock Creek Reservoir courts.

Four Events To Augment Pro Program

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

District professionals added four events to their fall schedule at a meeting yesterday at Indian Spring, including a 72-hole District Open event, October 4 and 5. Courses and purses for the new tourneys will be determined at a later date.

In a pro sweepstakes following the meeting, Mel Shorey played the water-logged Four Corners course in 1 under par 70, including a 33 on the front nine, to win by a single stroke over Cliff Spencer's even-par round of 71.

The first of the quartet of additions to the pros' card is a pro-pro Scotch foursome tournament on September 13, played in Scotch foursomes over the 26-hole route. Pros will pick partners and play alternate shots. Some 15 teams will probably compete.

Monday, September 27, a championship pro amateur over the 36-hole route is carded, pros playing with one partner and no handicaps. The District Open will follow, for a purse that may reach $500, with another innovation following on October 15, a pro-assistant tournament, best ball, over 36 holes.

Shorey's sweepstakes victory was the result of the finest round of the season on the part of the East Potomac pro. He scored 2 birdies and 7 pars for his first nine 33, but went over one pair of holes on the back 9, scoring 1 birdie. He paired with Wiffy Cox to defeat Roland MacKenzie and Frank Cunningham.

Spencer trailed Shorey by a stroke, also playing the first 9 in under par, 34, but was 1 over regulation figures on the long second 9, Wiffy Cox was next with 72; Frank Cunningham, Bob Barnett, and Roland MacKenzie grouped at 75, followed by Al Treder at 76, and George Diffenbaugh, 78.

Spencer and Diffenbaugh defeated Treder and Barnett, 2 and 1, despite Treder's 3 birdies in a row on 5-6-7. Two of them were halved by Spencer.

Sports in Brief

By the Associated Press.

NICK PETERS BEATEN.

New York, Aug. 27.—Carl Red Guggino, 132, Hartford, Conn., defeated Nick Peters, 134½, San Antonio, Tex., in an eight-round preliminary to the Sandy McDonald-Emil Schoix bout at Madison Square Garden tonight before a crowd of 5,000 spectators.

MISS COCHRAN OFF.

New York.—Jacqueline Cochran, the only woman entrant in the annual Bendix Trophy race from Los Angeles to Cleveland, September 2, said tonight she would leave North Beach Airport at 5 a. m., Eastern standard time, tomorrow for the West Coast.

MISS WHITE WINS.

Keller, Va.—Asa Taylor, 93-year-old resident of Bullbeggar, who attend the first Keller fair 60 years ago, was among the Eastern Shore crowd that saw a home towner come through with a blue ribbon today in the fair's annual horse show.

Rebecca A. White, of Keller, riding Lady Luck, captured first place in the horsemanship class, one of the features of the program which had been postponed from Wednesday because of rain.

START BERMUDA RACE.

Newport, R. I.—Reviving memories of days when similar sailing duels were common, two square-rigged yachts with canvas stretched on their tall masts tonight were on the high seas in a 660-mile race to Bermuda.

A noon-day, freshening wind cleared for and set the little ships, the Seven Seas, owned by William Gubelman, and the Joseph Conrad, owned by H. Huntington Hartford, on their way.

800 HORSES READY.

RECOVERS SEARS CUP.

Marblehead, Mass.—A crew from the Pequot Yacht Club returned the Sears Cup and the national junior sailing championship to Long Island Sound today for the first time in 15 years when Capt. Charles Stetson sailed to a third place in the closing race of the series.

WINS JUNIOR TITLE.

Englewood, N. J.—Wilson Flohr, husky 19-year-old Summit shotmaker, added the metropolitan junior championship to his recently acquired New Jersey junior title at the Englewood Golf Club today. He came from behind with a sub-par burst of golf to conquer lanky Billy Clark, of Ridgewood, 2 and 1, in the 18-hole final.

JUNIORS FORM DOG SHOW.

New York.—The formation of a new dog show organization, limited to exhibitors 16 years of age and under, was announced today by James Melville Fowler, of Summit, N. J., who will serve as its head. The organization, known as the United Dog Clubs of America, will serve in a capacity similar to that of the American Kennel Club, so far as shows are concerned, acting as a governing body and issuing licenses for shows.

Par Takes a Beating In Glens Falls Play

By the Associated Press.

Glens Falls, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Jack Patroni, a dark horse from Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., equalled a par-busting course record 65 today to lead a star-studded field in the first round of the $4,000 Glens Falls Open that saw regulation figures bettered 22 times and equalled 10.

Patroni's sparkling round, carved out of a record five under par 31 on the outgoing nine and a 34, bettered regulation figures by 7 strokes and duplicated the course mark established by Gene Sarazen, the stocky squire of Brookfield Center, Conn., and Leo Diegel.

Sarazan, recent Chicago Open winner and runner-up in the Lake Placid Open last week, fired a subpar 67 today to gain a second place tie with hard hitting Jimmy Hines, of Garden City, Long Island, two-time winner here.

All three pace setters struck dead to the pin most of the way and putted with uncanny ability over rain-soaked greens.

Bracketed at 70 were the blond Jimmy Thomson, the Scottish-born siege gun from Shawnee-on-Delaware; Horton Smith, North and South Open winner; the 47-year-old Willie Macfarlane, 1935 winner with a record 72-hole aggregate of 274, 14 under par; Augie Nordone, Syracuse; Harold Graham, West Brighton and Mike Turnesa, Elmsford.

Regulation figures were equaled by nine, including Alex Banadek, of Syracuse, an amateur. The rest of the field of 151 trailed along with scores that scaled as high as 92.

Among those who failed to better or equal par, but still rated in the "running" for the test that continues tomorrow with another 18 holes and concludes Sunday with 36, were the slender Denny Shute, P. G. A. king, and Ralph Guldahl, National Open champion, each with 74's.

Lawson Little, former United States and British amateur titleholder, also took a 74, as did Clarence Clark, of Bloomfield, N. J., 1936 Lake Placid winner, while Willie Klein, of Wheatley Hills, needed a 75, and Willis Goggins, of San Francisco, Calif., took 76 blows.

"Lighthorse" Harry Cooper, Chicago veteran, who is top-money winner thus far this season, began his quest for a slice of the $4,000 prize money by taking a 73.

Raleigh Haberdashery Golf Tourney Today

Raleigh Haberdashery will hold its annual employes golf tournament this morning at 8 o'clock at the Capitol Golf and Country Club (formerly the Bannockburn Country Club), near Glen Echo.

Marlboro's ProgramOff; Race Today

By Walter Haight.

Racing will be resumed at the Marlboro track today. Regardless of the fact that the only road into the plant may continue to be blocked by a swollen creek, officials said they would present the program. Baltimore patrons will have usual train service. If the road to the fair grounds parking area is not passable, Washingtonians and others who arrive by car can walk a mile along the railroad track to reach the grounds. General Manager Joseph B. Boyle said last night that if the road is closed he would arrange to have the race train run a shuttle service between Marlboro and the track.

Yesterday's card, one of the few called off in the history of Maryland racing, was erased following a storm of cloudburst intensity last night that added several feet to the already swollen Western Branch which normally trickles under a bridge. Entrance to Marlboro by auto was impossible yesterday.

The creek was so high at post time that the bridge was inundated and a stream 100 yards wide and 6 feet deep in places flowed over the roadway. Improvised ferry boats were pressed into service to transport workers across the flooded area.

Boyle said last night that, unless there is heavy rains before today, he has been informed that the roadway will be passable. The State roads commission has a crew ready to work on the road as soon as the water recedes.

Autoists were considerably delayed in leaving the grounds following the Thursday program. The water at that time was over running boards and at least one car in three was stalled. Teams of boys did a land-office business of pushing cars out of the water at a dollar a throw.

However, no patrons were marooned for the night at the track and all had departed by 11 p. m.

The only cars there yesterday morning were those of horemen and employes.

AHEARN.

When the large list of names of those who had passed the bar examination was announced several days ago, names of three Georgetown athletes appeared . . . MUSH DUBOFSKY, line coach; BILL DUFF, last year's fullback, and JOE MEGLEN, captain and fullback of the '35 eleven, are the new attorneys . . . speaking of college athletes, three G. W. footballers have really given up their homes to play the game . . . when BRUCE MAHAN, HOWARD TIHILA, and TED COTTINGHAM left their homes in OREGON four years ago to come East and enter G. W. they had no idea it would be permanent . . . all are seniors and have not returned home in the long stretch of time . . . LAWRENCE A. BAKER, vice president of the U. S. L. T. A., has recently returned from Europe, where he saw much of the Davis Cup competition . . . he says that the BUDGE-VON CRAMM match in the Eastern Inter-Zone final was the greatest tennis drama ever staged . . . and that he will take BUDGE again if the two meet in the National Singles championship final . . . which they are likely to do . . . unless BOBBY RIGGS steps in there . . . which wouldn't be such a surprise.

BILL RHINEHART'S athletes who are on duty at the public park pools will have some vacation . . . They are due to report to football training camp, when G. W. opens at Camp Letts, September 6 . . . and the pools won't close for them until September 7 . . . which will give them exactly minus-one day to rest . . . They are saying that BUDDY MYER is a drawback to the team, but in checking the figures you will find that the Nats' captain, although hitting nearly 100 points below him, has batted in more runs than CECIL TRAVIS, the fair-haired boy of the infield . . . note to GOLDIE AHEARN . . . SYLVAN BASS, Baltimore promoter, admits in 42-point type on the world's most complicated poster that he has "stolen a march on the Washington promoter" . . . he has matched CHARLES "HOBO" WILLIAMS against one BEN BROWN, the Georgia Wildcat . . . This idea of the REDSKINS practicing, regardless of the weather, may be a great idea from the conditioning angle, but not so from the reporting angle . . . ask the boss, JOHN PAULUS, who, after getting to bed a 5 a. m., arose to watch the local pros work out at Anacostia at 9 . . . he took one look at the downpour and voted to sleep, remembering that a team just doesn't practice in the pouring rain . . . but one more cerebral function and the boss was dressing—for the weather—and a visit to the Redskins' camp . . . and sure enough, in a rain that turned the field into a pool, they drilled.

* * * *

We've finally found the man who was in GOLDIE AHERN'S corner the night of that memorable AL FOREMAN fight . . . BERT GREEN, colored employe of the G. W. athletic office, himself a fighter of sorts in his day, was the man who dragged GOLDIE from the center of the ring . . . at the end of the first round . . . a group of movie stars, who want a team in HOLLYWOOD, have tried to buy the franchise of the SAN FRANCISCO MISSIONS . . . and it is rumored that the management will be offered to BABE RUTH . . . the clique is headed by GEORGE RAFT . . . the COMMUNITY CENTER department's athletic department will be headed this year by PETE ENGLISH, former Wilson Teachers' athlete. . . .

At The Post

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Dear Al, Selections at Marlboro.

Horsemen and jockeys had a good joke on "Skeets" Holland, the ebony boy who boots home an occasional winner. Holland, who normally weighs around 120 pounds, had to take off weight each time he has a mount. He did not know yesterday's races had been called off. He spent a good part of the morning running around the track in a rubber suit to sweat off the poundage. He came by the secretary's office later and discovered that he had been working for nothing and that the races were off. Holland went to the track kitchen, ate a good meal and said that he would have to take to the road again tomorrow morning. There was much speculation around the track as to whether or not the water in the creek blocking the road would go down. Perhaps the best tip off on the subject came from a colored fellow who said, "That water's going to be down by tomorrow. It runs right under my house and I sho knows that creek." A book could be written on the ferry service over the canal that was once the road. One customer, after being transported to the other side, announced that he was without funds. He was promptly dropped in the muddy water. The need of another entrance to this track has been written in letters a mile high for years. Each racing day the cars are blocked and patrons face long delays even when the creek is its normal self. It looks like Marlboro's official family has been caught in its own backwash of unpreparedness.

BILL.

First race—Can Bloom picks up 4 pounds off that recent victory, but seems about to carry the assignment and a set of brackets here would not surprise me. Whoa Boy ran a nice second at Belair and will deserve consideration in this field. Green Water was knocked back at the break here opening day and will be dangerous with better racing luck.

Second race—Landsman worked in fast time over the Bowie track before being shipped here. I'm going to toss out that poor recent effort. Ginger Hackle is fit and ready and will be in the thick of contention. Pageantry should like the going.

Third race—Ina Dear gets in with only 106 pounds for this and has a good race at Belair as a recommendation. Needs only the right ride. Justa Jimmie's last was a good one. Proteus to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Sumac circled his field and went on to win in excellent style on Thursday. Seems to be at top form and I look for two in a row. Nimule turned in a splendid effort last out. Tom's Boy to gain the show award.

Fifth race—Icy Wind is ready for the question at this sprint route. Must turn in a best effort to down this formidable field, but I'm going to string along. Miss Leannah has some class and is dangerous. Small Change to take of the others.

Sixth race—James Boy, poorly handled in his last at Cumberland, may benefit from improved handling and take down the chief award. Threatening and Infilee to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Jim Brown galloped to an easy win in his last and needs only to repeat the effort to win in this group. Early Call and Porphyry to complete the money bracket.

Best bet—Jim Brown.

Champ Lou Ambers Arrives for Battle

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Without even the courtesy of a storm warning, Lou Ambers, the Herkimer Hurricane, blew into town last night, wearing his best suit and a big, toothsome smile that almost caused the Models' Union, Local No. 12, ask to see his traveling card.

The lightweight champion looked ready to step right into the ring with Howard Scott, instead of waiting for Tuesday night when they are scheduled to supply the feature fisticuffing of an all-star card.

He was accompanied by Charley Goldman, first lieutenant to Al Weill, Ambers' pilot, who remained in New York. Charley was putting a bear hug on a little brown bag as if it contained Lou's title, but the contents merely proved to be the Hurricane's fighting britches and other paraphernalia.

Ambers was in great spirits, spreading more joy and sunshine through the terminus than it has been subjected to since the railroads paid the mortgage. He weighed out at 136 pounds after a workout yesterday, and seemed to be enjoying excellent health. His condition was reflected in his good humor and easy frame of mind. If the champ is worried about Scott you'd never know it.

But from his speech you gathered that he has a wholesome respect for the local gladiator.

"He gimme a helluva go up there in Hartford," he admitted when pinned down to the subject. "He's got a peculiar style, keeps punching alla time, and when you're up against a guy like that there's only one thing to do—keep punching yourself."

But he appeared to be more worried about his musical career than boxing, even boxing Pedro Montenez, the potent Puerto Rican ne meets for the title next month. He knows Pedro's plenty tough, incidentally, but thinks he'll take him over the 15-round distance.

But about the music.

"Sure, he's musical," Goldman volunteered. "He plays a mouthorgan or juice-harp, or sump'in like that."

"Naw, it's a little bit of everything," Ambers corrected him. "I like the clarinet best of all, though. I'd give anything to know how to play one of them things. You know, I've led a couple of bands, Benny Goodman's and Tommy Dorsey's, and when I hang up the gloves I expect to have my own band ready to go on tour. But I gotta learn to play a clarinet."

"Why don't you buy one and practice," we suggested.

"I would, only I got a hot temper and they're too tough to play. I'd bust it up in no time."

"You don't know," we said. "You might catch on quickly."

"But I do know," he said, clinching the argument, "I busted up four of the d—n things."

Corn Prices Slump With Heavy Receipts

New Crop Contracts Fall to Lowest Level of Season.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—A severe drop in corn prices, with receipts the largest for one day since July 28, unsettled the entire grain market today and wheat lost all of an early advance of almost 2 cents.

Corn futures plunged 2¾ cents to 4 cents a bushel. Contracts specifying delivery next month were weakest, falling the maximum permitted in one session. New-crop contracts tumbled to new lows for the season, around 30 cents a bushel below year ago levels.

Prices of corn for immediate delivery dropped 4 to 6 cents when receipts of 21 cars arrived in Chicago. In addition, there was a bearish Government report predicting sharp price declines when the large 1937 crop comes to market this fall.

Corn closed at the day's lows, 2½@4 cents below Thursday's finish; September, 95½; December, 63 @63¾; May, 64@64¼, and wheat was up to ¼ off; September, 1.06⅜ @1.06¾; December, 1.08½@1.08⅝; May, 1.11@1.11⅛; oats unchanged to ¼ higher; September, 28⅝@28¾; rye, ⅜@⅝ down; September, 79¼; lard unchanged to 5 cents off.

Five Convicted On SEC Charge

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that five individuals were today convicted in the United States District Court at Detroit, Mich., for violations of the Securities Act of 1933, and the mail fraud and conspiracy statutes in the sale of stock of R. Cummins & Co., Inc. The convicted defendants, Edward A. Attix, Samuel Lafata, Leonard E. Brown, Harry H. Landay and Frank R. Lane, all residents of Detroit, were indicted on March 30, 1937.

The indictment alleged that the defendants sold the securities without registering them with the commission as required by the act and defrauded a number of Michigan residents. The indictment further charged that the defendants falsely represented that the corporation was an old established distillery company which formerly operated in Kentucky, and that they padded the company's pay roll, received "kick backs" from contractors who furnished machinery for the rehabilitation of the plant, and obtained stock by selling property to the corporation at prices greatly in excess of the price paid for it.

Finance Company Enjoined.

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced that it had secured a final decree of injunction yesterday in Philadelphia against Pennsylvania Finance Co., Inc., Howard J. Levitt, William H. Victor and Samuel Sussman enjoining them from further sales of Class A preferred stock and common stock issued by Pennsylvania Finance Co., Inc., until there is an effective registration statement as to each of these securities under the Securities Act of 1933 and from further sales of these securities, without disclosing certain particulars to purchasers.

Morris Plan Bank Holds Dance Tonight

The fall dinner dance of the Morris Plan Bank Club will be held tonight at the Indian Spring Country Club. This event is the semi-annual dance given for the directors, officers and employes of the bank.

Arrangements have been made by Mabel D. Driver, Vera W. Rhine and Ferdinand E. Walter. Among the out-of-town guests will be several bank officers prominent in the Morris Plan Bankers Association.

Early Upturn Is Indicated By Trade Signs

New York, Aug. 27.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., says today.

"Although business activity is now approaching the summer low point, signs are beginning to appear that the downtrend will be checked and reversed before long. For the first time in a number of weeks, there has been an improvement in steel demand, and although orders are still running below shipments, it is expected that the difference between orders and shipments will be narrowed, and possibly completely eliminated, within the next month to six weeks.

"The automobile industry is operating at close to its probable low point for the year. A number of companies have suspended operations for model change-overs and others are expected to follow during the next week or two. Because of the likelihood that there will be comparatively minor model changes this year, the change-over period will probably be brief and production of 1938 models should be well under way by the end of September. Prospects for the industry over the remainder of 1937, at least, are generally promising.

"Because of the recent sharp decline in prices of a number of agricultural products there has been some concern as to whether there will be much, if any, expansion in farm purchasing power during the next year. We see no reason, however, to change our previously expressed opinion that there will be a worthwhile gain in farm income from this year's crops."

Gold and Silver Imports.

Gold imports totaled $28,516,898 during the week ended August 20, the Commerce Department reported yesterday. This compared with $27,405,820 in the previous week. Silver imports aggregated $1,140,600 and $635,753 for the respective weeks.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Continue Downward in Less Active Trading; Cotton Declines; Pound Lower.

New York, Aug. 27.—Steadiness in Government bonds, with almost a total lack of interest, weakness in other bonds, a decline in the pound sterling, and resumption of the retreat in stocks on a reduced sales volume brought a dreary week of full trading sessions to a close. Stock turnover fell considerably short of a million shares and prices were near the worst in the last hour, with numerous losses of 1 to 3 points. Commodities were fairly steady, but cotton futures sold into new low ground.

In stocks Steel common and a handful of other recent favorites took the bulk of the selling. Steel dropped to around 108, for a loss of nearly 3 points at the worst, but its tone was steadier than yesterday, even though the low price made it look worse. That was largely true of all stocks—the lower they go the weaker they appear, even when they are losing only small fractions. General Electric was another recent leader to give up more than 2 points without much rime or reason.

Opening prices were firm to irregular, but it soon became clear that the market did not feel like a rally, and so it was left to scattered and scanty small lot buying and to the amusement of the professionals, who still seemed inclined to go short rather than to cover or try for the long side. Heavy volume, comparatively, on the previous day, had encouraged the belief among the optimists that the market had gone through the climactic zone of the decline, but although activity today was resumed on the familiar low-deal basis, the bulls acted like discouragel steers.

Rate Cut Accepted.

Such strong official hints had been given that the New York Federal Reserve Bank would cut its discount rate this week to 1 per cent from the 1½ per cent rate prevailing for the past two or three years that the event attracted less attention than other recent Treasury maneuverings have done. The case for and against had been well aired, and in the financial district opinion already was well formed that the reduction was decided upon as a means of helping the Treasury with its prospective financing in the main and as a minor measure to give small banks some reassurance that their present investments would not be allowed to decline too far.

As a purely monetary measure no great difference in condition was expected to be made. Most of the recent selling of Government bonds were preparing for the autumn has taken place among banks which credit demands and increased cash in use, an increase predicted to be around half a billion dollars on the circulation item. Those banks are selling, or allowing to mature, securities yielding well under 1 per cent, and neither the 1½ per cent discount at interior Federal Reserve Banks, now the rule, nor the 1 per cent in New York can make borrowing profitable for a bank which continues to hold low-yield securities.

Crop Damage.

The rosy crop picture of two or three weeks ago has been tarnished somewhat by the hot, dry weather in parts of the Middle West, which has ruined corn and other feed crops, but has come too late to diminish the wheat supply. On the whole the outlook for cash income on the farms and of a good traffic movement on the railroads remains good.

The Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial activity for July remains unchanged at 114, which compares with 108 a year ago. It scarcely could be expected that the strong upward movement in the early months of the year could be maintained throughout 1937, and only the pessimists will conclude at this time that no improvement will meet the autumn. Meanwhile demand for bank credit is expanding.

Banking Position.

As a rule the current banking statistics reveal the reason for changes in discount rates at the Federal Reserve bank, but nothing of this sort can be detected this week. Bank loans increased further, but the rise was only moderate, and in any event rising loans on all previous occasions of bank rate changes have been accompanied by an increase, not a decrease, in bank rate. Gold continued to pile up, but at a less rapid rate, circulation declined, and excess reserves fell.

Treasury to Issue Simpler Tax Forms

Simplified tax returns, easier to read and accompanied by instructions more readily understandable than those of previous years, have been approved by the Treasury Department for use by individuals and corporations in reporting 1937 incomes, Undersecretary Roswell Magill announced yesterday. Aside from the larger type and added white space gained by the elimination of irrelevant questions, Treasury officials said an important improvement was the transfer to the back page of the individual returns of the affidavit sworn to by the taxpayer. Returns can thus be sworn to without the disclosure of income figures to notaries public or administering officers.

Nothing suggested a cut in discount rate, but the explanation for the action was clear enough yesterday in the further sharp fall in Government bond prices.

Self-Help.

Declaration of a dividend of 125 per cent by Amoskeag Industries, Inc., the local organization which bought the huge Amoskeag textile mills to save Manchester, N. H., from a severe depression, shows what can be done by citizens who have the energy, the brains and the self-reliance to help themselves instead of bawling for PWA, WPA and other forms of Federal nursing for grown-up infants. No dividend at this time on the $5,000,000 investment in properties once carried at 20 to 30 times that amount, probably would have been paid had it got been for the undistributed profits tax, but the money nevertheless had been made as profit on the investment. Revival of business in Manchester has come partly as a result of improvement in the textile trade, but largely as a result of the efforts of the energetic citizens of the place.

Silver Premium.

Silver in London fell to the equivalent of about 43 cents an ounce, lowest since June, 1934, but the Treasury continued to peg the local price at 45 cents, less ¼ cent commission, thereby giving those who desired to speculate on maintenance of that price an opportunity to buy in London for resale here at a substantial profit. Those who had silver here could sell at once to the Treasury and buy for future delivery in London. The Treasury requires delivery tomorrow of silver purchased today, and importers consequently were not guaranteed a profit, but on the basis of the long stability of the Treasury's buying price there seemed little risk. There is a tax upon profits made by such operations, but with a spread of nearly 2 cents an ounce it is worth paying it. Just why the Treasury should buy silver above the world market value as reflected in the London price is a mystery, but so also is the price of 77 cents which the Treasury still pays for newly mined silver.

Bank Stocks.

Bank stocks responded to realities with moderate gains, which was at least unusual for a day following a cut in the Central Bank rate. The Federal Reserve Board has widely advertised its expectations of a slightly firmer short-term money market, and the cut in the discount rate almost requires a higher money market to make it effective. Even the most discouraged bank stockholder felt a little hopeful.

New Building Here Cuts Down Home Shortage

Construction Last Year Outstripped Gain in Population.

New homes built in Washington during 1936 provided housing for more people than the estimated population gain for last year, according to C. J. Ryan, vice president of Investors Syndicate, of Minneapolis. Residential building here from 1931 to 1936, inclusive, sheltered only 49.4 per cent of the estimated population gain during that time.

This new housing situation in Washington was brought about by a gain of 71.3 per cent in new homes over those of 1935 and an increase of 4.2 per cent in the estimated population over the preceding year. Furthermore, there were more new homes erected in Washington last year than in any one year in more than seven years. Washington, D. C., ranked fifth among the list of 43 regions studied, in point of persons provided with new homes last year.

These statements by Mr. Ryan were based on a housing survey by his company of 310 cities, situated in 41 States and the District of Columbia, containing more than a third of the Nation's population.

"Residences put up in Washington," Mr. Ryan explained, "provided shelter for 25,516 people during 1936, although it is estimated that population during the same time increased by approximately 25,000. In Washington between 1931 and 1936, inclusive, new shelter was provided for 65,792 people, but it is estimated that population during these same years increased by 133,284.

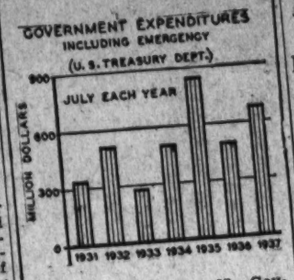
Federal Spending Continues Upward



Boston, Mass., Aug. 27.—Government expenditures continue to go up. July expenditures surpassed July of last year by 39 per cent, while in the first seven months of this year expenditures were almost equal to those in the same 1936 months which included the soldiers' bonus. At the end of August the national debt will be close to the 37,000,000,000 mark.

Pact Aids Peace Despite 2 Wars, Kellogg Claims

Father of Treaty Pleads for World Support on 9th Anniversary.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 27.—Despite the undeclared wars raging in China and Spain, Frank B. Kellogg tonight expressed a note of optimism for the Paris peace pact, which he helped to father and which was signed nine years ago today.

In a statement read over a radio hookup by Prof. James T. Shotwell, president of the League of Nations Association and director of the division of economics and history of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Kellogg said:

"In spite of the spirit of violence which today moves some of the nations who were signatories of that pact, I confidently believe that the formal renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy by practically all of the nations of the world will prove to have been an epoch-making event.

"True, that declaration is not self-executing. Its effectiveness must depend upon a nation-wide, indeed a world-wide public opinion. . . .

"As in the case of any great moral principle, its open acknowledgment is the first step, an essential step and, I believe, a great step toward its becoming a principle actually guiding the conduct of men or nations."

Dr. Shotwell described the pact as a signpost "marking out the era of the future from that of the past."

In another peace pact day broadcast, Mrs. Estelle M. Sternberger, executive director of World Peaceways, described the covenant as "an ideal to strive for, an ideal within the reach of this very generation if the people will speak out."

Japan and China Held Accountable For U. S. Losses

that the American Government formally has taken such action. The wounding of the British Ambassador to China by a Japanese machine-gunner and the threatened Japanese naval blockade of Chinese ports were believed to have inspired the steps taken yesterday.

So far Japan has not officially served notice on this Government of an intention to lay down a naval blockade, as is required by international law. Secretary Hull said that, aside from newspaper accounts, all this Governments knows of the blockade threat is that the Japanese foreign office sent to the American embassy in Tokyo a copy of a statement given to the press.

State Department attaches yesterday were inclined to discount suggestions that the Japanese had any serious intention of interfering with foreign shipping in Chinese waters. The risk of offending Great Britain and the United States was held to be greater than any advantage that might flow from such action. Meanwhile, this Government continued to refrain from any discussion of prospects for invocation of its neutrality act.

Attack Plot Hinted.

Meanwhile, the Chinese Embassy here distributed to the press a message received from the Nanking government which stated that the Chinese government deplored the wounding of the British Ambassador and hinted that the incident might not have been entirely accidental.

"It is to be noted," the copy of the message given out here stated, "that the Japanese militarists have been very antagonistic toward the nations of friendly powers for their efforts in helping the modernization and industrialization of China. They have been especially jealous of the cordial relations between China and Great Britain since the visit of Sir Leith-Ross. This is also but one of the many instances of the utter disregard by the Japanese militarists of the civilian lives and properties, Chinese or foreign, in China."

In a second statement, the Chinese embassy referred to receipt of an official report to the effect that the Japenese "have gone so far as even to use poisonous gas at Chu Yung Kwan, a few miles northwest of the Nankow Pass, and its vicinity in addition to their indiscriminate shelling and bombing." These "inhuman and unlawful acts" were reported to have been committed by the Japanese on Tuesday and Wednesday, the embassy stated.

Danger Denied.

Meanwhile, Marine Corps headquarters here reported receipt from Col. C. F. B. Price, commanding officer of the Fourth Marines at Shanghai, of a declaration that relatives and friends of those men had "no cause for special concern regarding the safety of the families of the Fourth Marines who remain in Shanghai."

The event was observed by a radio address by Assistant Secretary of State George S. Messersmith under auspices of the Peoples Mandate to End War. Messersmith frankly conceded the world had not yet abandoned war.

"Sentiment Grows."

"Nevertheless, despite the deteriorating international outlook," he asserted, "more and more people are conscious of the enormities of war, and are clamoring for statesmen to insure the preservation of peace."

He cited the Western Hemisphere as one spot on earth where the foundation for lasting peace had been laid and lauded Secretary Hull's July 16 declaration of principles for international relationships, which he said might appropriately be termed "pillars of peace." He said these principles were prepared "in the hope that expression of approval from other governments would have a revitalizing effect on the standards desirable in international conduct."

Thousands of Dead Strew Fields at Shanghai As Fresh Troops Drive Defenders Into Trap

ternational areas of Shanghai, Americans and other sorely-tried foreigners were thankful for respite. The life of Sir Hughe Montgomery Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador to China, injured Thursday by machine-gun bullets from a Japanese airplane, still was in danger. Physicians were hopeful of his recovery, however, after he had responded favorably to a blood transfusion given by H. A. Thomson, a United States Navy pharmacist's mate from Mountain View, Calif.

Lady Knatchbull-Hugessen, who had been summering at Peitaiho, seaside resort 150 miles northeast of Tientsin, was hurrying to her husband's side aboard the British destroyer Defender, due at Shanghai today.

In the north, a Japanese column was reliably reported to have skirted the Chinese defenders of Nankow Pass, gateway to Inner Mongolia, and to have trapped the Chinese army between two mechanized columns.

A Chinese flanking movement southwest of Peiping, however, menaced Japan's 150-mile front in the Hopei-Chahar sector and was believed to have delayed the start of a major offensive by Japan's reinforced armies.

Two Chinese divisions held a thin line on the headland cut by the Yangtze and Whangpoo rivers north of Shanghai when Japan's heavy guns began the 30-hour fight for Lotien.

Trucks Rush Crack Troops.

The din of the battle reverberated in Shanghai. The city's bewildered natives listened in terror to the distant thunder as motorcades of trucks rushed three divisions of China's ablest troops, arms and tons of munitions to the new front.

Chinese officials said the Japanese had retreated from Lotien to Lion Forest but this, too, was denied. Japanese declared the battle had definitely turned in their favor, that they held the razed town and were poised for an advance on Shanghai's back door, Kiangwan, on the city's northwest side.

The battle was accompanied by repeated Japanese air attacks on Chinese positions from the outskirts of Shanghai north to the confluence of the Yangtze and Whangpoo.

New explosions spread desolation through Liating and Nansiang to Liuho. Pootung, the rich industrial section across the Whangpoo from the international area, again was a target.

The Shanghai municipal council removed 200 bodies of Chinese noncombatants from the Wayside district of the Whangpoo River front—their answer to Japanese denials that Japanese machine guns raked civilian crowds on the river shore.

Japanese warned the council it could remove no more bodies from the Japanese-occupied Hongkew, Yangtzepoo and Wayside districts. A Japanese army spokesman also decided the American-mortgaged Wing On Co. cotton mill in Woosung would be bombed despite American flags because of the "presence of Chinese firing trench mortars."

Withdraw From Settlement.

The main Chinese forces, which had hemmed the borders of the International Settlement, continued to withdraw farther inland to get out of reach of the Japanese naval guns in the harbor. The Japanese, nevertheless, were determined to cut them off in the "1932 pocket" of Liuho and Woosung.

Lessening of the Chinese pressure on the edges of the foreign areas—and, incidentally, the close-in fighting—greatly relieved foreign residents. Some night clubs, stores and cafes were reopened.

Soviet Says Japan Seeks Only Excuse To Shell Consulate

By the United Press.

Moscow, Aug. 27.—Soviet Russia, breaking weeks of silence as Sino-Japanese warfare raged beyond her Mongolian frontier, charged tonight Japan is seeking provocation to bombard the Russian consulate general in Shanghai.

The charge, answering Japanese allegations the consulate held Chinese spies, carried a stern warning Japan would be held responsible if the consulate were violated.

200 Civilians Butchered; 300,000 Men Dig in to Defend Nanking.

Military observers, despite the Chinese tactical retreat from the heart of Shanghai, saw an important development in the arrival on the Shanghai scene of Gen. Chang Fak-wei, commander of the famous "Chinese Ironsides" division.

300,000 Guard Nanking.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Aug. 28.—China's most brilliant military strategit, Gen. Pai Chung-hai, massed 300,000 men in the boggy lakes district, 35 miles west of here, today and prepared for the greatest fighting of this war—and Oriental Battle of the Marne.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Central government dictator, tore apart his high command on the Shanghai front and called on Pai, once his bitter enemy, to be the "Marshal Joffre" of China.

The veteran Chinese divisions dug in along an irregular line 100 miles from the south bank of the Yangtze River to the south shore of Hangchow Bay and said they would defend their capital, Nanking, to the last man.

Pai was appointed formally to the post of chief of staff of the central army, while Gen. Chang Chih-chung, who had lost heavily while trying to drive the Japanese into the Whangpoo River in 15 days of fighting around this shell-torn city, was relegated to the post of a subcommander.

The Chinese hoped the "starvation blockade" of 800 miles of their coastline, from Swatow, in the south, to Shanghai, in the north, would result in Japanese collisions with Britain, the United States and other foreign powers which would cause new international pressure on Tokyo.

Cuban House Approves Batista's Sugar Plan

Havana, Aug. 27 (AP).—In a 17-hour session the House of Representatives today approved "in principle" the sugar bill—cornerstone of Fulgencio Batista's "three-year plan."

Restrictive measures have cut the output from 5,000,000 tons to less than 3,000,000. Col. Batista aims at a more rounded economic structure, in which Cuba is to produce more of what it consumes and develop other products for export.

President's Mother Feted.

Paris, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Gov. and Mrs. Earle of Pennsylvania, tonight were guests at a dinner given by Ambassador William G. Bullitt in honor of Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of President Roosevelt.

Gay Soldiers Meet Wounded At Tokyo Gates

Cheering, Weeping Crowds Contrast When Trains Pull Into Station.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 27.—Exhilaration and grief marched hand in hand today as trains bearing new troops for the China front made way for others bringing back Japan's dead and wounded.

No general mobilization was announced, however, and the war office made no comment.

On one side of the picture caravans of automobiles, festooned with flags and war mottoes, raced through the streets. Throngs lined the routes of troops, singing and shouting "Banzai!" as the columns paraded to the railroad stations.

On the other, thousands of weeping women and saddened, saluting men jammed the platforms as the trains from China came in.

The ashes of 37 officers and sailors from Yokosuka, Japan's greatest naval base, were given impressive memorials when they arrived. High ranking naval officers attended. Navy Minister Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai read the tributes.

The Emperor and Empress gave grants to the victims' families and other prominent Japanese sent tributes of flowers and money.

After a conference on the shooting of Sir Hughe Montgomery Knatchbull-Hugessen, British Ambassador to China, the cabinet deferred action until a full report is received.

U. S. Envoy Gives Party in Nanking

Nanking, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Undismayed by the roar of Japanese war planes which have bombed China's central capital in six major air raids during the last 15 days, United States Ambassador Nelson Trusler Johnson tonight celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of his entrance into the diplomatic service with a formal dinner party for his staff.

Japan Cool to War, Says Sun's Widow

Shanghai, Aug. 27 (U.P.).—Mme. Sun Yat-Sen, widow of the founder of the Chinese Republic and sister-in-law of Nanking Dictator Chiang Kai-shek, declared today a large part of the population of Japan opposes invasion of China and that "Japanese banks and industry already are showing serious signs of impending collapse."

On the Air Today

A new series of organ programs favoring operatic selections begins this morning, WMAL, at 10, with Pearl Hauer devoting much of her "Myriad Voices" program to "Aida."

• • • •

National Amateur golf is provided four times from WJSV: 1, 5:30, 6 and 6:45, as Ted Husing describes the play from the course at Portland, Ore.

• • • •

The tenth and last broadcast from the Salzburg Music Festival will be heard, WMAL, at 3, a presentation of the second act of "Don Giovanni," with Ezio Pinza and Elisabeth Rethberg. By short wave from Austria.

• • • •

Anthony Frome, one-time "Poet Prince" of N. B. C., is to speak in "Message of Israel," WMAL at 6. Unofficial word comes that Frome will sing in the course of the program. He is, in private life, Rabbi Abraham L. Feinberg.

• • • •

Bob Burns Says—

I like to read quotations, but I get kinda discouraged when I find for almost every one of them there's another one that contradicts it. One of them said "Real joy must be shared, while misery is better borne alone." And another one says "Misery loves company." After we grow up, I suppose that it is human nature for us to pick the quotation that suits our purpose the best, but I do believe while a child is growin' up and getting his character molded he should be taught to "take it on the chin." I know one man who was the weakest character I ever saw and he blamed it all on a doting mother. He says she pampered him when he was a boy; but, after all, I suppose he's the kind of a man that would have to blame it on somebody—but I do happen to know that when he was a little boy his mother sent him to school with a note for the teacher and the note said "My little boy is a delicate, sensitive child and if he should happen to be naughty, which he is liable to be, I am sure if you will just punish the boy in front of him it will frighten my boy and teach him a lesson."

Earle Feature HasKayFrancis In a Blond Wig

In 'Confession,' She Fights Gallantly for Sake of Daughter.

"CONFESSION." First National picturization of a screen play by Hans Rameau, starring Kay Francis, with Basil Rathbone, Ian Hunter and Jane Bryan. Directed by Joe May. Reviewed Friday by Mary Harris.

An aura of "Madame X," greatest of the mother sacrifice plays, hovers over "Confession," although the show's announcement states that the plot is taken from a court record of many years ago. This just shows to go you, perhaps, that life follows fiction.

But the emotional knockout pattern of "Madame X," though taken from life, is unimpaired. There is the mother who has sunk to the depths, who keeps out of her child's life so that it may not be spoiled, who kills the would-be seducer of the child and who pays the penalty of that killing with sealed (well, practically sealed) lips.

Most important point of "Confession" is Kay Francis' venture into a new field, that of the completely tarnished lady. As Miss Francis tarnishes, she also emerges as a blonde with multiple curls. Somehow, this also marks the turning point of the drama as well as Kay's tresses. So long as the Francis remains a brunette, she is the lovely and subtle creature we have long known. But when she goes blonde both the distinction and personality seem to evaporate. We suspect that it isn't all the goshawful curls and bob, but that Miss Francis just isn't adapted to portray the starker emotions. Without subscribing to the "typing' of stars, it still appears that Miss Francis has a definite metier in which no actress in Hollywood can even approach her—and also has definite limitations. The demi-monde is not for her, and she should never forget to insist that her clothes be done by Adrian, or is it Orry Kelly?

Jane Bryan Impresses.

Smart double flash-backs carry along the story of "Confession" in attention compelling fashion. The story starts right in the middle and leads up to the slaying of the oily seducer (yes, he is Basil Rathbone), thn comes the beginning of the court room scene, and another flashes back to the beginning and all motives are cleared up. It is all done very dexterously and gives no end of impetus to the action.

Though Miss Francis is surrounded by players of star caliber, it is a comparative newcomer, Jane Bryan, whose performance is most interesting. In playing the daughter of Miss Francis, she gives just the right blend of sub-deb shyness, almost awkwardness, and budding beauty.

Those estimable and skillful actors, Messrs. Ian Hunter and Basil Rathbone, offer their usual perfect performances as the husband and the horrid scoundrel who compromises a yohng wife and later tries to seduce her daughter. One of the finest things about Mr. Hunter is that no matter how virtuous a character he portrays, he also manages to toss in a saving savor of humor. Poor Mr. Rathbone, certainly used to it by now, has one of the low-downest roles ever handed out. Dorothy Peterson, wholesome and sweet, Laura Hope Crews, very jolly, and Donald Crisp and Robert Barrat, stiffly dignified, all appear to advantage.

A Pleasing Soprano.

Soprano Marjorie Gainsworth, on the stage, wins the affections of the audience by demonstrating that an opera singer isn't necessarily snooty. She goes in mostly for popular numbers, the "Street Singer," from "Naughty Marietta," beautifully done, being as far as she went in the direction of opera. Especially lovely was her interpretation of "September in the Rain," which made you think you'd never really heard the song before.

But most stunning and novel act of the stage show was that of the Debonairs, six tap-stepping lads who appear with the blondely lovely dancer, Emily von Losen. At least two of the boys are embryo Paul Drapers. Their number in which they go on a sit-strike is smarter than paint. Another one or two like it and they should be sitting pretty on Broadway.

Ross Wyse, jr., and June Mann, always much liked in Washington, again offer their own original goulash of amazing dancing and startling comedy. The Four Vespers, handsome young fellows in white slacks and red sweaters, do lofty acrobatics.

Columbia

"You Can't Have Everything," true, but you can have a brand new dose of Ritz Brothers zanyism, some torch singing by Alice Faye, Louise Hovick (Gypsy Rose Lee), making her film debut, a bit of fiddling by Rubinoff and another sample of Don Ameche's brand of make-believing if you get down to the Columbia before next Friday.

Following carefully in the footsteps of "One in a Million," "Wake Up and Live" and "On the Avenue," earlier musical successes from the Twentieth Century-Fox studios, "Wake Up and Live" depends upon its songs, cutting up and production numbers rather than its story, which pretends to be nothing serious.

Whether it is as successful as those three antecedents is something you'll have to decide for yourself. Putting comparisons to one side, you're just a wooden Indian if you don't guffaw when boots rain upon the Ritzes or fail to achieve affinity with the swingy tunes of Mack Gordon and Harry Revel.

This is the second week on F street for "You Can't Have Everything"—it was at the Capitol week before last—but partisans to the incredible Ritzes and the dreamy eyes of Miss Faye are hereby notified that it won't go on indefinitely.

Gable Charm.

Judy Garland's charm bracelet threatens to become a Frankenstein. Her arm already is weighted down with 37 charms and the bracelet still is growing. Latest contribution is a tiny, gold-framed picture of Clark Gable, which he presented her in appreciation of her singing "My Dear Mr. Gable" in Broadway Melody of 1938."

'Love Under Fire' and Diverting Stage Bill Vie for First Honors at Capitol

By Gerald G. Gross,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

"LOVE UNDER FIRE." Twntieth Century-Fox production of a screen play by Gene Fowler, Ernest Pascal nad Allen Rivkin, based upon a play by Walter Hackett, starring Loretta Young and Don Ameche, with Borrah Minevitch and His Gang, Frances Drake, Walter Catlett and Harold Huber. Directed by George Marshall. Previewed August 25. At Loew's Capitol.

Gene Fowlerisms stick out all over the script of this ephemeral little cream puff about a boy and a girl falling in love with each other to the obbligatto of screaming shells and Borrah Minevitch's harmonica music.

Here, in "Love Under Fire," is a very pleasant dish of film fare, which, augmented by a vaudeville bill of extraordinarily high quality, should send folks out of the Capitol this week congratulating themselves on having selected a winning card.

About those screaming shells, let's not give you the impression this is a war picture. Just because you see a plane shot down in flames and hear the stuttering of machine guns every now and then, don't take "Love Under Fire" to be anything but a light comedy compounded with a jigger of quasi-melodrama, a dash of music and a liberal sprinkling of laughs.

True, the love theme is born and nurtured amid what would appear to be the present revolution in Spain, but, as a serious factor, the war no more intrudes upon the plot than it does in "The Chocolate Soldier." Fowler and his two writing accomplices, Pascal and Rivkin, saw well ot that.

Two Pretty Girls.

Since the picture has many bright quirks, topped off with an O. Henryish ending, we're not going to spoil your fun by telling you any more about the story than that it has to do with a pretty girl "vacationing" in Spain, a Scotland Yard man vacationing in Spain, a pretty girl in Spain on a "mission" and a troupe of mouth organists barnstorming in Spain. The locale of "Love Under Fire" is Spain.

Don Ameche, who is gaining valuable screen experience by steady work, is being shaped into an important player for whom a successful film future can be safely predicted. Miss Young, a veteran by comparison, is her same dependable self. In a lesser role Frances Drake is both beautiful and capable.

Harold Huber is the kind of a screen heavy you feel sorry for, knowing as you do he is going to be left holding the bag in spite of his prodigious efforts to save his hide. E. E. Clive, as the marryin' skipper, supplies the choicest morsels of comedy. The Minevitch mob is no different from the aggregation you've seen from time to time at the Capitol or Earle, or in previous pictures, save that their number is reduced to seven.

With deepest respect for the merits of "Love Under Fire" as a delightful 75-minutes worth of fun, we are inclined to say that the current vaudeville bill is even better than the other half of the program. Maybe it will strike you the same, if you are taken in by the type of drollery Walter and Paul Briant offer, the mimicry of a Sheila Barrett, the voice and looks of Sara Ann McCabe and the "sophisticated rhythm" of Mann, Dupree and Lee.

Fannie Brice as Scarlett.

Those are the four acts introduced by Master of Ceremonies Johnny Perkins, who might examine his own material closely and see if he doesn't think it lacks freshness and sparkle. He still has the good old Perkins personality, though, and with an advantage like that it will be a shame if he doesn't bring it out more fully with better gags.

The Briant boys, in a novelty entitled "Delirium," exhibit a form common in European music and variety halls but far too rare in the United States.

Miss Barrett, who is getting to be better known on the radio than on the stage, gives her conception of Fannie Brice playing Scarlett and W. C. Fields as Rhett and does a merciless impression of a Southern girl in a night club, as well as an impersonation of Garbo. If you're not too sensitive about Dixie and "Gone With the Wind," you will enjoy her immensely.

Miss McCabe, another radio songstress, charms both the eye and ear. Mann, Dupree and Lee, no strangers in Washington, have a diverting dance act which, like the Briants' routine, is unusable over the ether waves but good stuff in a theater.

Sandwiched between the feature picture and the stage show is a Willie Howard comedy, which might have been enjoyed more if we hadn't heard the best part of it on our receiving set recently; a newsreel, and a snappy overture by Phil Lampkin and his pit orchestra.

'Keep Cool, Girlie, I'm Here Now'

That, or something similar, is what John Loder seems to be saying reassuringly to Anna Lee in this scene from "King Solomon's Mines," the romantic adventure drama about a quest for African treasures. The film, which also features Roland Young, Cedric Hardwicke and Paul Robeson, opened yesterday at the Metropolitan.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 27.—Idol Chatter: Those jewels Katharine Hepburn wears in "Stage Door" are the real McCoy—about $25,000 worth, according to the private detectives who guard them between scenes. One word description of Clark Gable: Earresistible. Bet Joan Crawford was burned the other night—she forgot her autograph album and a lot of foreign notables were there. Wonder what J. Barrymore really thinks of his Elaine's performance in that little movie gem, "How to Undress in Front of Your Husband."

KATHARINE HEPBURN

I can almost overlook George Raft's high pants-line when I see his touching devotion to Virginia Pine's little daughter. Midwest censor boards are starting a drive to amplify movie chorine's costumes—an irony when every bathing beach resembles a nudist resort. Look alikes: Marjorie Lane (Mrs. Brian Donlevey) and Tallulah Bankhead. Think it was spring of 1931 when Claudette Colbert last appeared on Hollywood Boulevard in something other than slacks. Shirley Temple is one up on most stars—she has a "dance-in" as well as a stand-in.

After reading today's publicity barrage from Twentieth Century, I am convinced that Fidler is the only man in town who has never had a date with Dixie Dunbar. Don Ameche is a past master in the art of telling dialect stories, and you can name your own dialect. The Brown Derby bartender claims that Bacardi cocktails are Filmtown's favorite drink. Which reminds me that Joe E. Brown, a teetotaler, has a soda fountain where the bar ought to be in his house. The critics who accuse Irene Dunne of being "too placid" should see her when she dubs a shot on the golf course.

One of my favorite people is Lela Rogers, who has had a lot to do with the success of her dancing daughter, Ginger. In fact, without Lela's cleverness . . . But here's the anecdote, judge for yourselves. Ginger, an ambitious beginner, was playing vaudeville in Memphis. Her first performance was so listless that the matinee audience "sat on their hands" and the disgusted theater manager promptly announced that she was through and wired for another act to take her spot on the night program. But Lela knew that the dismissal could not be effective without written notice. She hurried the heartbroken Ginger out of the theater and kept her in hiding until a few minutes before curtain time. Then, rushing her into the theater, she had her on the stage before the manager could deliver her walking papers. The orchestra, caught off guard, had to cover up by playing Ginger's music and—inspired by Lela's determination—the condemned redhead stopped the show!

Near Santa Monica, in a beautiful mountain valley which has just been opened for residential development, Douglas Fairbanks has several acres of land. And, until a week or so ago, he was in despair because picnickers, blithely disregarding his "No Trespassing" signs, overran the place and left behind them an unsightly mess of empty cans and garbage.

But a Fairbanks never admits defeat. A few days ago, he erected new signs and since then, he reports with pride, not one picknicker has stopped in the valley. The sign reads: "Please do not kill the rattlesnakes on this property. They are harmless unless molested and they catch the gophers."

Olga Celeste had risked her life for your entertainment more often than any other person in Hollywood. She started as a wild animal trainer for Col. Seelig 20 years ago, doubled for Kathleen Williams in those hair-lifting jungle serials of prewar days and has doubled ever since when a movie script called for dangerous stunts with a lion or leopard. She owns Midnight, a jungle-bred black leopard captured by Frank Buck, who claimed it could not be trained. But Olga had the beast working before the camera three months after she bought him. I have watched her taking what seemed to me to be insane chances with her big cats a dozen times, and her absolute fearlessness always gave me an inferiority complex. But today, praise Allah, my pride of sex is restored. I saw Olga lift her skirts and scream when a mouse scurried across the studio stage!

Postcard Lost, George Kaufman Became Playwright, Not Actor

It's a trite and yet always interesting observation that little things sometimes shape the course of a man's whole life. It will be remembered that Whistler was once a West Point cadet. He flunked his first examination and wittily remarked afterward, "If silicon had been a gas I'd have been a soldier." George S. Kaufman, co-author with Moss Hart of that merry harlequinade, "You Can't Take It With You," declares that if a certain postcard had not been lost in the mail he might have been an actor and adds—"and today Eugene O'Neill would still be America's foremost playwright."

From the time he appeared in a one-act play one Friday afternoon in a Pittsburgh high school, Mr. Kaufman cherished an ambition to be a Broadway actor. When he first came to New York, he carried with him a letter from a close friend of the late Charles Klein, addressed to that playwright and recommending the bearer as a "promising amateur." Mr. Klein was about to put a play of his called "The Gamblers" into rehearsal and he engaged Mr. Kaufman for what is known as a "walk-on" part.

"You will be notified when rehearsals begin," he remarked.

Mr. Kaufman was never notified. The Post card calling him to the first rehearsal got lost in the mails and he was ashamed to go back, feeling that the playwright had taken sober second thought.

When he began to write plays he always "got up" in all the important male roles when they got into production, feeling that some time an actor might get ill and he could leap into the breach. Once when "Minick," the first play he wrote with Edna Ferber, was being tried out in Buffalo, O. P. Heggie, the leading man, was taken ill. Mr. Kaufman suggested to Winthrop Ames, the producer, that he was ready to go on. Mr. Ames thought he was joking and directed the stage manager to go on that night. Edna Ferber said it was just as well anyway.

"We'd have had to change the name Minick to Rosenstein," she remarked at the time "and that would have made all-around complications."

It will, of course, be remembered that Mr. Kaufman did get his chance several years ago when he appeared for months in the role of the disgruntled playwright in his and Moss Hart's "Once in a Lifetime." By that time, however, he was too firmly established as a playwright to think of acting as anything more than a bit of a lark.

Just at the moment, his close associates will tell you, he is well "up" in the role of Mr. De Pinna—of "You Can't Take It With You," —the dreamy-eyed iceman who once came to deliver a cake of ice at the home of the Sycamores and just decided to stay on indefinitely as one of the family.

Thrills Aplenty In Met's New AdventureFilm

'King Solomon's Mines' Boasts African Intrigue, Robeson's Voice.

"KING SOLOMON'S WIVES." Gaumont-British picturization of a story by A. E. Rowlington and Charles Bennett, featuring Cedric Hardwicke, Roland Young, Anna Lee, Paul Robeson and John Loder. Directed by Robert Stevenson. Reviewed Friday by Sally Stroud. At the Metropolitan.

High adventure with a band of diamond seekers is proffered in "King Solomon's Mines," and so deftly is the theme handled that the miners out in Hollywood must realize there are still several veins unexhausted in this sort of screen fare.

This English production relates the pictured episodes of an English trader's diary (Cedric Hardwicke) who encounters a tall-tale-telling Irishman and his bonny daughter (Anna Lee) on a trading expedition in South Africa. Kathleen, the colleen, makes trouble for the trader and his friends (Roland Young, John Loder), for she insists on following her father across the desert on a wild search for King Solomon's mines.

Umbopa (Paul Robeson), a mysterious oxen-driver, guides them across the desert to the mine, where lives a savage African tribe of warriors. Umbopa is the rightful ruler of the scattered kingdom, and eventually assumes the throne, after a good deal of threatening war dances, incantations by the local witch doctor, and battles with colleagues of the unlawful present ruler, who is an uncouth person who kicks his faithful subjects in the teeth and wears a silly smug expression and a carload of fancy white plumes. He would have liked nothing better than feeding the white intruders to the lava which seethed within the mine. But Robeson becomes king, boy gets girl, and all get diamonds.

Robeson Sings Well.

Notable is the photographic treatment of the rugged African terrain, the faithful detail of the native dances, and the awe-full smashing cave-in of the mine. If the story seems vaguely familiar, 'tis probably because numerous writers, perhaps your E. R. Burroughs, may have used the rich Rider Haggard books as source material for their tales of adventure.

Cedric Hardwicke gives probably the best performance as the quiet, bearded trader. His scene where he uses an eclipse of the sun to intimidate the fierce savages is excellent.

Paul Robeson as Umbopa is in exceptional voice. With true majesty he is ever the king, even when he is carolling a song about you old mountain you and listening to the echoes. This is undoubtedly the best role Robeson has fallen heir to in the flickers, and he does it full justice.

Roland Young as a slightly unconscious English nobleman who rushes off on a treasure hunt for the sheer fun of it, is himself, which is a minor delight. His asides are often devastating and the small fellow carries off a jest in the face of death with a certain amount of urbanity.

Many Short Subjects.

Anna Lee, heroine, and John Loder, hero, are not quite in the Hollywood mold, which implies they have a strange and likeable freshness. The hero actually grows a beard and the heroine actually shoves her lovely face into a muddy water hole to drink. Are you looking, Max Factor?

The whole family can see this, and the whole family will like it.

"Sunbonnet Sue," a merrie melody about two courting mice, is fairly novel, as colored cartoons go. This one has the Three Ritz Brothers in a song-dance act.

David Menoza and his orchestra present several dance tunes and not so well. They look funny. But their music is fairly smooth, especially their version of "Limehouse Blues."

Besides a full newsreel, which contains a brief statement from China's Ambassador Wang on Japan's policy in the Far East, there is an effective short about stunting daredevils. "Peiping Falls," special Paramount newsreel from the fighting sector, has some astoundingly good shots of the current struggle. There must be an unnamed Joris Ivens on the Para newsgathering force.

Palace

A second week for "Broadway Melody of 1938," was inevitable. With an appeal of sufficient scope to fill the Palace Theater for two, three, four weeks and longer, if all the Washingtonians who could enjoy its music, comedy and spectacle make it their business to see and hear Judy Garland, Sophie Tucker, Eleanor Powell, George Murphy, et al, under one roof, we'll feel kind of sad when "Melody" finally does pack its tack and trot away.

M.-G.-M.'s newest edition in this series of revusicals presents Sophie Tucker, not as the coon shouting, barroom-story telling entertainer of her variety days, but as a surprisingly efficient character actress who, withal, can still knock out the tune and lyrics of "Your Broadway and My Bro'way" in a manner that will make you wish Hollywood had discovered her sooner.

It gives you a 13-year-old girl who earns the envy of older, seasoned warblers with her interpretation of "You Made Me Love You." That, of course, would be Judy Garland.

It gives you Eleanor Powell and her inimitable taps; hoofers Buddy Ebsen and George Murphy, who not only know their steps, but who double admirably in comedy and straight acting, respectively; Willie Howard, still one of America' leading comedians even though his fame has dwindled with the decline of the stage revue; Charles Igor Gorin, used for the sole reason that he has an excellent barytone voice, which is reason enough; Robert Benchley, with his distinctive brand of humor; Robert Wildhack, who can make a head cold a hilarious thing; Helen Troy, of the twangy talk, and Billy Gilbert, assassin of the king's English.

It gives you, too, Robert Taylor and Binnie Barnes, but neither has much to do, which is unfortunate for Miss Barnes, a very capable actress. There is, besides, a story, but it is not allowed to detract from the enjoyment of the high paid specialty artists, who not only earn their salaries, but deserve bonuses as well.

Supplementing the main screen attraction this week are a subject entitled "Rocky Mountain Grandeur," a newsreel which includes several feet of film bearing on the Chinese situation and "Mickey's Amateurs."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Aug. 27,

ROBERT IRWIN: On August 30, before Judge Freschi, District Attorney Dodge will apply for the appointment of a lunacy commission to determine whether or not you're insane. The possibility of your standing trial for the Gedeon and Byrnes murders therefore is slight . . . Bert Lahr: Joe Robinson, who married Mildred Schroeder and secured an injunction restraining her from obtaining a Reno divorce, has decided upon two extreme measures. He'll apply to the California courts to have her punished for contempt—under a reciprocal agreement between the States—and then sue here for an annulmant . . . Newspaper Guild: Benton & Bowles will have a Broadway column in electric lights, at Broadway and 47th. It will be run like the Times' electric light bulletin board. A whisky company will sponsor it.

• • • •

LOUIS B. MAYER: So many of our employes are now working in British studios that when the Denham Studios, in a burst of patriotic fervor, unfurled four Union Jacks from their flagpoles, Connery Chappell said: "One for every Englishman working there!" . . . Dick Merrill: The Lady Peace, your first transatlantic plane, is now being used by the Franco forces in Spain. Your second plane is being sought by the Chinese Government—but the $45,000 price tag is too high . . . John Montague: Broadway's celebrities are being petitioned to intervene—together with Bing Crosby and your other pals—in your behalf.

• • • •

BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB: Brentano, the publisher, went to Bermuda for a vacation. He's being attended by three doctors now—for sunburn . . . Blue Book: A new publication, called My Social Calendar, will be published shortly by Leonard MacBain and Robert Durham. When the editors showed a dummy-edition, with blank pages, to John O'Hara, the novelist commented: "Comes the Revolution—that's the way Social Calendars will look!" . . . Meyer Davis: Your wife, who lost $30,000 at the Monte Carlo tables at her last visit there, took another fling—and last week recouped her losses.

• • • •

CHICO MARX: Your brother Harpo now is an accredited bridge-expert. He's just been admitted to the Cavendish Club, where the minimum stakes are 2 cents a point . . . Dorothy Lamour: Victor Young, Paramount's music director, will make his screen debut in your new picture, "Summer Romance" . . . Jack and Charlie's: At Jack Warner's home, guests who want a drink don't ring for it. Instead, they dial "21" . . . Tommy Farr: Joe Louis was measured for his boxing gloves. Because of his long thumbs, the first six pairs didn't fit. The lucky seventh did.

• • • •

ADOLPH HITLER: Paul White and William Daley, who engineered the tearing of the swastika from the Bremen, and who escaped at that time, are in Spain now, fighting for the loyalists . . . John L. Lewis: The Empire State movie operators who are picketing now, had big signs on which "C. I. O." was displayed prominently. Monday night they carried new signs, with "A. F. of L." displacing the "C. I. O." But before the letters "A. F. of L.," in small type, were two words—"Unaffiliated with."

• • • •

EVALYN WALSH McLEAN: Your son, Jock, who was reported engaged to Eleanor Young, daughter of Robert R. Young—who bought the Van Sweringen interests—failed to appear at the ball she tendered in Newport, and society's buzzing. What's up? . . . Mike Riley: Joe Marsala, who didn't write "Music Goes Round," broke your record at Hickory House. He's been signed for a 13-month run . . . Will Hayes: Hollywood precedent was broken in the screening of Kingsley's play, "Dead End." Sam Goldwyn and Lillian Hallman, who did the adaptation, wanted to alter some of the lines used in the play-version. Director William Wyler insisted that Kingsley's lines remain. And so Goldwyn phoned Kingsley for advice. And the author suggested that his own words be changed.

• • • •

LEAGUE OF NATIONS: The bombing of the Augusta at Shanghai is said to be inciting local newspapers to start a campaign similar to the one preceding the Spanish-American War. This time the slogan will be: "Remember the Capital of Maine!"

• • • •

Trans-Lux

Guns are booming this week at the Trans-Lux. Two wars show how money can be spent to buy misery and horror, yet the smiling face of Gen. Franco, in Spain, makes one think that the whole business is a pretty party. Hitler, Mussolini, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and the United States War Department general staff all get in the front line of the world news and the war shots of the Chinese sector are interesting and varied.

"March of Time" runs through the political spoils system, summer camps and one phase of the gun-popping, this time a study in close-up of the War Department bigwigs sizing up the reports from the Spanish front.

Famous world figures literally parade across the news screen; Daniel Frohman and August Heckscher celebrating birthdays in the golfing eighties; Alphonso, late of the crowned heads, attending another royal wedding; William Green denouncing the Reds, and "Mysterious Montague," king of the fairways, facing the strong arm of the law. (No, this isn't Mr. Roosevelt's week—except for one March of Time flash with Marvin McIntyre.)

Summer sports run the course from Mexican Indian pole dancers to photographing flowers with an X-ray machine, and in between you take your choice of diversions, rodeoing in Montana, rocket bicycle gliding, riding with the lady jockeys, yacht racing at Nassau, going the tennis pace with Mr. Budge or shooting at the archery target in your own backyard. With Lew Lehr's muddled English tossed in for good measure—this time to weep verbally for an Angora rabbit losing its wool.

If you've missed some of the newspaper editions you'll discover that the United States wheat crop is a hummer and that the WPA marchers held a parade here recently, even calling at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue. And, oh, yes, the lobster crop in Maine has shrunk.

"Stranger Than Fiction" has the laugh of the week, an inventor with a bell-ringing device to wake up sleeping motorists. He ought to sell a hundred thousand in the first printing. "Mickey Mouse" in color and the first tinkle of the school bell round out the program.

Freight Car Hobby Tires Bobby Breen

The company was "on location" at the old railroad station at Palms, Calif., and Bobby and the 160 other boys appearing with him checked over the trains which constantly clattered past. By the time the morning was half over they had counted more than 350 cars, and the sport definitely began to pall on them. "Aw, shoot!" said Bobby. "Let's count white horses."
